Here is a specimen paragraph from the same pen that appeared in that paper a few days ago:

"At a word from John Taylor every man in the penitentiary would have made the necessary promise. That proves that John Taylor has been made the custodian of their conscience. Should either John Taylor or those slaves of his ever exercise any political rights until the tyranny and slavery are both destroyed?"

What logic could be more convincing and profound? A falsehood is first simply asserted; it is then concluded that the unsupported assertion proves omething else, and therefore what ollows is supposed to be demonstrated. He might as well have said, with equal logic and more propriety: 'The moon is made of green cheese That proves that Luna is in the centre of the milky whey. And therefore the writer is a lunatic, and ought not to be entrusted with political rights or even to turn the crank of the Tribune libel machine." It is a marvel that such a mass of twaddle and fuddled sentences as are published to-day were permitted to appear in print even in the columus of the most inconsistent and untruthful paper on either hemisphere.

JERUSALEM

VISITED BY A COUPLE OF ELDERS. The following appears in the Milennial Star of May 3d;

JERUSALEM, April 8, 1886. President D. H. Wells:

DEAR BROTHER-When I mailed you my last letter I had just arrived in Jerusalem and taken a hasty view of its streets. The impression, however, which the filth, the dark and dismal dwellings made upon me have not been effaced. The principal commercial street, the Broadway of Jerusalem, is just wide enough for a camel, a donkey and a dog. People stand on the street while trading unless a dry goods box lashed to a camel's back happens to change their posture. The buildings throughout are of stone and conway through the city to the east side where the road leaves the St. Stephen's Gate and leads down into the valley of Cidron and upon the Mount of Olives, at the foot of which the garden of Gethsemane is located.

From the summit of the Mount of Olives, Jerusalem, with its thousands of domes, its church steeples and tow ers, and its minarets, is lovely to be hold. Like the modern world, its ex-terior looks fine from the distance The Church of the Holy Sepulchre and claimed that the church is located over the sepulchre of the Savior and on Golgotha, where He was crucified; and further, that below, where the cross stood, Adam was burled, that a drop of blood fell from the wounds of Jesus upon the head of Adam, whereupon the kiss the stone which rests upon the located where the temple stood, covers a large stone upon which it is claimed Abraham offered up a ram instead of Isaac. There seems to be a considerable doubt about the mosque occupying to general acceptation the temple stood there. One is told curious stories wherever he goes. The Mo-hammedans who exclude from their mosque Christians and Jews, except a special permit is obtained through the agency of a consul, assert that this on his white horse the stone started to follow, but the angel Gabriel people of this Republic declare to be back. The impression of the hand in the stone is shown to substantiate the assertion; but my friend's questions about the stone in the air were cun-ningly evaded. The gulch between Mount Morish and Mount Zion has been considerably filled up, so that the two hills are not now so distant. On the 2nd we went from Jerusalem to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are within a mosque, and the Turks allow neither

On our return we stopped some time at Bethlehem, where we visited the St. Mary's Church, according to tradition, built over the grotto in which the Savior was born-a grotto then, as alongside of President Cleveland's late message to Congress on the subject of convening a legislature for Utah?" our way over the mountains to the Dead Sea. It was raining, but our sentment was not dampened enough to keep us from taking a bath in its briny waters. From here we rode in two hours along the valley of the Jordan to the traditional spot of the baptism of the Savior, and in sage, to which it bears no relation, it two hours from the Jordan to Jericho, where we found quarters in a Russian hospital. The following day we came on to Jerusalem by way of Bethany, where we were shown into the tomb of Lazarus, and where the house of Martha and Mary is pointed out. From Bethany the road leads around the south side of the Mount of Olives and the St. Stephen's Gate. We have visited the principal places of interest in and about Jerusalem, and expect to leave to-morrow morning on horse back for Damascus, or I suppose, to be more grammatical, I should say mule back. We are in good spirits, and have remarkable appetites. Brother Lyman wishes to be kindly

A. P. HARMON. Toronto a year ago last February. He described Preller as he knew him then, and exhibited a port trait which he had painted, and it had been pronounced an excellent likeness. He was shown by McDouald of the prosecution, during the latter's visit to Toronto, a post mortem photograph of Prelier's body and had made a portrait from it. Witness described his visit to St. Lovis after the murder; he had visited the cemetery in company with one of the counsel for defense. Had seen the casket in which Preller's body had been placed exhumed, and recognized the body without doubt as that of Preller. He recognized the corpse by the face and a peculiar scar on the left cycbrow. He considered the body to be in a remarkably perfect state of preservation. The wi'ness identified two different photographs of Preller.
