LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

To-day the Democratic Convention meets, as per appointment, at Baltimore, Maryland, to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States. The proceedings will be watched with exceeding interest, for upon the action of this convention depends, to a very great extent, the result of the presidential contest. It may suit party tactics to understate the importance of this convention, and to affect indifference respecting its action; but this deceives no intelligent person. The action of a party which numbers three millions of voters, which at the last election, handicapped as it was with an unnecessary load, made so good a race, is far from being unimportant; it must, if it remains united, have great influence in determining which shall be President of the United States for the four years after March 4th, 1873.

The Opera House, where the convention will be held, will hold 2,500 people. It will be decorated for about $5,000, about one-half the cost of the decorations at the Philadelphia Convention. It is designed to erect in front of the building a grand portico of evergreens over the pavement, bearing the words:

"Every mountain has sent forth its hill; every valley its stream; every river its flood; and let the avalanche of the people be heard."

Over the main entrance of the building will be the following:

"The constitution is still the object of our reverence—the bond of our union—our defense in danger—the source of our prosperity in peace."—Andrew Jackson.

Over another entrance will be the following motto from Thomas Jefferson:

"The whole art of government consists in the art of being honest."

On the front of the building, above the first story, there will be four quotations from Washington's farewell address. Within the house the coats of arms of all the States, and the portraits of distinguished Americans, will be conspicuously displayed. Beneath the portrait of Washington will be the following:

"In short, that I was no party man myself. The first wish of my heart was if parties did exist to reconcile them."—Washington to Jefferson.

Maryland with her 16 delegates will be placed in the rear. The Territories will be assigned places in front of her, and they will be flanked by Utah with her two votes and Nevada with her six.

MEETINGS, CONT'D.—Bishop E. F. Sheets returned yesterday from a visit to Summit and Morgan counties. On June 23rd and 24th Elder Joseph F. Smith and himself attended two days' meetings at Coalville. During the night of the 29th and all day on the 30th, there was a tremendous rain-storm, with an occasional fall of snow, which made the attendance at the meetings lighter than it would have been under more favorable circumstances. There are some grasshoppers at Coalville, which are damaging the crops to some extent.

Grasshoppers have visited Morgan county. The grain crop there do not have a very promising appearance, but there will be a fine yield of potatoes. Bishop Sheets, accompanied by Bishop W. W. Cuff, held meeting at Washup last Wednesday. Meeting was also held at Kamas Prairie, where the grasshoppers were also destructive.

Last Saturday and Sunday they attended two days' meetings at Heber City, where Bishop Hatch had a fine bower erected, and the attendance was very large, many being there from neighboring settlements. At all the meetings above alluded to, Bishop Sheets was a good time was enjoyed, and the people manifested great eagerness to give substantial assistance in emigrating the poor from the nations.

THE LECTURE.—Mrs. Dunway's lecture on "Human Rights" at the Tabernacle last night was well received. She was introduced to the audience by Governor Woods, when, without unnecessary preliminaries, she entered at once upon an elucidation of her views on the subject of her discourse. In many respects the lecture was one well worth listening to, both in point of idea and delivery, her enunciation being clear and distinct, and her style very pleasing, with the exception of a fault common to most lady lecturers—a slight tendency to pious toned monotony. If she would speak more naturally, she would be much more effective.

She announced that she was not a "woman's rights woman," but in her career had based her course on brother and sisterly love, and was therefore an advocate of "human rights." She did not believe in the rights of one sex over the other, but that the rights were the common property of humanity, irrespective of sex. Her position was not that of a crusader against the wrongs of the world, but that of a reformer, and she was unflinchingly opposed to the slanders and calumnies against the rights of women. All forms of government should be systems of mutual interest without regard to sex; and it was because men, by their usurpations, had excluded woman and her benign influence from governmental circles that corruption had so increased, until our own nation was flooded with it.

The lecturer contended also that the Almighty never intended one code of morals to be applicable to one set of mortals, and another code to another set, and endeavored to show the good results which accrued when men and women went hand in hand in all the walks of life. She stated that she had been checked, and even overpowered by a woman's sphere being sufficiently extended to have enabled her to wield an influence to that end.

The beneficent effects of the bestowal of the elective franchise on the women of Wyoming was alluded to. Many men raised the objection to the enjoyment of political rights by women, that if the ladies engaged in such matters there would be no body to look after the babies. Such objections, however, were generally interpreted by bachelors, and when they entered the matrimonial state they generally reformed and saw things more clearly.

The lecturer declared that the bare thought of the principles of "free love," which had their advocates among a certain class of women, filled her with insupportable disgust, and she denounced such doctrines in the most scathing terms, and advertised to their utter obnoxiousness and reprehensible tendencies.

The temperance question was touched upon, and some excellent ideas were elucidated with regard to temperance reform being a most suitable field for the labors of women, man having demonstratively proved his inefficiency for the work.

Mrs. Dunway closed her lecture by alluding to a portion of her early life. She told how she had crossed the plains twenty years ago, from the eastern States to Oregon, and reason an original poem on the journey, in the Black Hills, near Fort Laramie, which she also recited in a vivid way the condition of matters twenty years ago with the advanced state of things in the great west to-day.

The audience appeared to be much pleased with the lecture, and manifested their pleasure by occasional applause.

Editor Deseret News:

I am informed that my name appears in the DESSERT NEWS in connection with others, as having signed a petition or memorial to Congress, vilifying the character of our people. I hereby certify that I have not signed said petition, neither did I know till recently that such instrument had an existence. Will you oblige me by giving publicity to the above?

Yours in the gospel,
J. W. COOK.

AULD LANG STERN.—Now comes an ancient acquaintance—the Burlington Hawk-Eye, with letters descriptive of the visit to this city by a representative of that paper, with the Iowa Press Association.

DANGEROUS PLACES.—The stringers of the bridge spanning the creek on the 19th Ward Bench, just west of the Arsenal enclosure, have fallen into the creek through the water washing away the bank, the whole bridge is liable to fall in with a heavy weight any moment and perhaps turn over a buggy or break an axle to the head of City Creek Culvert on the east side of East Temple Street should also be covered with boards, for the accommodation of foot passengers; as it is now open and exposed, it is very dangerous on dark nights, besides compelling persons to wade through dust or mud in order to cross the horse bridge.

DECORATIONS.—There is a fine display of decorative paper hangings in the north window of Z. C. M. I. clothing department, consisting of ceiling and panel center pieces, corners, borders, etc. A large stock of goods of this kind has just been received by the department, of a description that for richness and variety is ahead of anything of the kind in the Territory previously. The window is worth taking a walk to see.

WICHITA CATTLE MARKET.—Joseph G. McCoy, Wichita, Kansas, sends circulars concerning the cattle market at Wichita, situated "on the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe R. R., at the mouth of the little Arkansas River, upon the cattle trail, one hundred miles south of the Kansas Pacific Railway," where buyers can "get the first chance at the cattle as they arrive fresh from Texas."
