A modern craftsman leweler has made some very beautiful pieces, cs-pecially brooches, with bits of ancient glass. Some of these have lain for cen-turies under rulned temples, and the turies under rulned temples, and the years and contact with the earth have turned them into excuisite bits of tridescence. There are set in gold, elaborately worked and chased, and the effect is indescribably fewel-like and quaint. A brooch made by this artist was exhibited recently and was greatly admited. The glass was a rich cloady gray, streaked with darker bands, showing just in the middle a streak of richest red. The gold was wrought in-to a clump of pain trees and a train of camels crossing the piece of glass as if it were the evening sky. charming centre-plece for a Thanksgiving table seen last year was a mound of fruit arranged on a small sliver tray that, resting on silver feet, was elevated an tach or more from the cloth. A wreath of auti leaves encircled the tray, and the fruit was artistically arranged with the leaves and drooping wisps of bearded grain. A rustic basket of any sort or an Indian canoe, either one is a pretty holder for the center-piece of fruit. A large horn-of-pienty is frequently used, or smaller ones arranged at the corners of the table with flowers and fruit filling them. The Thanksgiving table, as a rule, is apt to be a very hospitable board, and of a generous length, which will absorb a good deal of decoration. One effective design had the center-plece of fruit, and at either end of the table a sheaf of wheat nearly two feet high, with a cluster of rich American Beauty roses rising out of the center of each sheaf. On a smaller table this decoration may be used alone as a cendecoration may be used atom as a con-ter-piece. The combination of the hot-house and modern flower with the wheat representing the very necessity of life seems a little incongruous in suggestion. Actually however, the gold of the grain and the rich color of the nece form a most attractive comhe rose form a most attractive combination.

If one has access to country fields in November, the glowing red berries and vines and branches of gorgeous hues that may then be had offer most artis-tic material. The downy thistle balls picked at the right time are affective

It should not be forgotten that au-tumn leaves may be gathered at the moment of their greatest beauty in late october or early November, and beau-tifully preserved by being dipped light-i- in a weak gom-arabic water.
