

of Pan and Bicchantes by Felix Fugen, of Vienna, of two nude nymphs, one is reclining on the ground while the other holds a cup of wine to the lips of a bronze statue of Pan. The figures are life size, of exquisite grace, coloring and outline. Many pictures of this class are on exhibition, but none I think is so much admired by connoisseurs.

Another painting, and the smallest I have yet noticed, is by G. A. Kuntz, of Vienna. The interior of a nun's apartment is unlighted, except by the moon that streams through the single window before which she sits, her head resting upon her hand, gazing silently into the great night heaven. The serene beauty of the chastened face and the isolation of the cell, as it were, on the frontier of the infinity into which she gazes, make a powerfully impressive and suggestive study. The countenance has been educated to serenity, the mind has been exalted by the contemplation of superior beings and eternal interests, but the strong emotional nature of the woman will clamor silently in spite of custom and the faintest shadow (perhaps I am mistaken) of questioning doubt and discontent is unmasked to the moon.

This painting is valued at only $500 gold, and will scarcely remain unsold till the end of the exposition.

There are one hundred and twenty-eight paintings in the Austrian collection, and it is very rare that a display so large is found containing so much merit. I have not space in this letter to more than mention a few of these. Nearly all the paintings in the Austrian collection are by Viennese artists. There is a landscape of the environs of Munich, and an interior of the Castle Ruin Taufers, both by Louisa Von Parmentier, paintings of excellent coloring and finish that would be quite an acquisition to the art department of the Woman's Pavilion, or, indeed, to any gallery.

Two pictures of still life by Max Schode deserve a more extended comment than I can now give them.

An afternoon dinner nap of a veteran epicure, in his chair, is admirable, and will most likely bring the price a-ked ($600). It is painted by Charles Riedel.

Two pictures, a "Peasant woman of Upper Austria," and "A Girl of Upper Austria," are specimens evincing close study of characteristic types and customs; they are painted by Latite Erneste.

There is a painting of cherubs in relief by Fred. Schilcher, the execution of which is so perfect that the beholder can scarcely be convinced by close inspection that they do not stand out from the canvass.

The daily attendance at the Exposition is slowly increasing, and hotels are encouraged to keep up their high prices. The rates at the Hotel Aubry are from two to ten dollars per day for room without board. But the summer is upon us in her sultry might, and the city hotels will soon be depleted by the watering and bathing places. The Stockton House at Cape May will be opened on Monday, and many interested in the Exposition are making arrangements to spend the sultry months there.

District Meeting—Other Meetings—Baptisms, etc.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, England, May 30, 1876.

Editor Deseret News:

On the 7th inst., we held a district meeting in the Butchers' Hall, Newcastle. Present from Utah, L. Brown, president of the Leeds Conference, William Nelson and A. Galloway, with a fair representation of local elders. We held three meetings during the day, which were well attended, and good attention paid by all present. The brethren who addressed the meeting spoke well.

A few days after the meetings I started to visit the southern part of the Conference. On Sunday, 14th, held three meetings at Stockton-on-Tees, one out of doors. There was a very fair attendance, but a wicked spirit was manifest, such a spirit as that which crucified Jesus, led on directly or indirectly by Sky Pilots.

On the 15th I went to Middlebro, and held two meetings. While there four persons were baptized and confirmed, one ordained to the office of a priest, and two children were blest. Several more are on the eve of baptism. They have excellent meetings there and a spirit of inquiry. The Saints feel well.

On Friday, 19th, I went to Hartlepool and visited a family that live there. The people in this part have now little desire for the Gospel. A great deal of preaching has been done there in former years.

On the 20th I left for Helton Downs and met with the Saints on Sunday, and had a good time with them. Ordained one teacher and one deacon.

On the 28th met with the Saints in Newcastle, had good meetings. At the close of the evening meeting two gave in their names for baptism. This branch (Newcastle) is prospering well under the care of Bro. B. S. Newton. The L. D. S. are under no need of using Wesley's words—

"Where shall I wander now to find Successors they have left behind?"

Thousands of Latter-day Saints can truly say that God has restored the new and everlasting covenant to the children of men, and the dispensation of the fullness of times when God is to "gather to gather all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on the earth." The Saints in this part, as a general rule, feel well though many of them have felt a good deal of poverty through the lack of employment. Still they feel good and buoyant in their spirits at "the thought that such a day will come," and those who are at home in Utah ought to remember that they have friends and brethren in these lands. Remember the promises.

Respectfully,
A. GALLOWAY.

It is getting to be believed throughout the country that if women are elected as school trustees there will be fewer scandals affecting schools.

MCCORMICK REAPERS, MOWERS AND HARVESTERS.

Who was the Inventor of Reaping and Mowing Machines?
MCCORMICK!

Who has been building Reapers and Mowers for over Thirty Years?
MCCORMICK!

FARMERS OF UTAH!

We have one question to ask you, viz: Ought not the Inventor of the Reaping and Mowing Machine, who has been building them constantly over THIRTY YEARS, and who has the largest capital and largest Manufactory of any firm building machines in the world, ought not he to be able to build as good and BETTER machines than any competitor?

Think of the above before you buy! Also, remember that there were more of the MCCORMICK machines sold in the United States last year, and every year, than any other make, and ask yourself the reason why. Is it not because they are the BEST and most DURABLE machines?

See for yourselves before buying. Remember that every machine is fully guaranteed.
