Winston Churchill, novelist, James K.

Hackett, theatrical trust hater, and Isabel Irving, actress-these three gi "The Crisis" to the Salt Lake public at the Grand Theater last night. Its coming had been heralded as another Independent triumph, second only to Mrs. Fiske's "Mary of Magdala," But it didn't reach those heights. Nevertheless it is a fine production. It is worth seeing. It is a dainty comedy rather than a drama and fairly beams with the beauty of the south. It tells, too, in captivating manner, the story of the pride and patriotism of those who gave their all for the "Lost Cause," while it simultaneously unfolds in equally entrancing style the conditions and purposes that brought forth the famous statement, "The North will not secede and the South SHALL NOT."

"The Crisis" is a woman's play. That is, it provides a strong role for a woman-Virginia Carvel, a part that is ving, but it has no such place for a ganization till the present, by Coun-man. So the heroine lives, moves and selor John L. Nebeker: vocal solos by man. So the heroine lives, moves and hand. So the heroine rives, moves and a ways where the hero is not. Stephen Blace, once played by James K. Hac-lett, now by Wilfred North, was con-sidered heroic for a time, but the idea was abandoned and he now maintains a respectful distance, and back and be-hand birm still further down the same Land him still further down the same grade, is the Clarence Colfax of Seymour Rose. Concerning Miss Irving, whose heart always beats for the southland, her work was dalatiness itself. Always charming, always piquant, always pretty, she gave an entrancing delineation of the morals, manners and dress of ante-bellum days. And while on the subject of dress it may be re-marked that not often is there seen upon the stage such fidelity in reproduc tion of attire, such scrupulous regard for correct furnishings, in fact so much "atmosphere" throughout as are furnished in Miss Irving's interpretation of "The Crisis." All was realism to the letter. How it all takes us back to the days of our grandfathers and grandmothers! The amplified pantaloons of the men, their quaint frocks and hats; the hoops, crinolines and curls of the women; the pictures on the walls, the furniture in the room and all the other stage furnishings,

And emphasizing all these were the stormy scenes that rent the Union well nigh in twain. The differences that ruled men's passions and blinded their visions, the crueity of the approaching conflict; even the barter and trade in human souls; the mingling of strife and love between friends and neighbors. were told with such clearness that one might easily imagine that he was, for the time being, gazing upon a magically illumined page of our country's history.

history. Having in view the circumsofiled size of the Grand stage, the wealth of picturesque scenery carried by "The Crisis" was spiendidly placed, though it caused some delay between each of the four acts. By all odds the pret-tlest picture of the night was that shown in the second act, at Colonel Car-vel's country home at Giencoe near St vel's country home at Glencoe, near St. Louis. To those of us who have visited the south the settngs for this scene were so surpassingly true to life that we almost felt ourselves transformed roars of laughter. As for the actin of the other characters, least said, soon est mended. "McFadden's Row o Flats" is one whirl of grotesque absur dity from beginning to end, and its only lief is in its variety acts with which it is crowded, the marches of the ici-ining contingent and the songs at dances. It will be seen again tonigh and as it appeals to a certain class o nates, there is no doubt of its good business.

The sale is now going on at the Grand for the season of drama and comedy by the Elleferd toek company which opens there Monday night next. Th first bill will be "A Flag of Truce," th second "A Man From Mexico."

The box office opens today for the sale of seats for the conference season at the Theater, which opens Monday night in "Sag Harbor."

Last night's reunion in the Twentysecond ward hall was a most enjoy able affair. The house was crowded man-Virginia Carvel, a part that is most charmingly portrayed by Miss Ir-ving, but it has no make by Miss Ir-Mrs. Nellie-Druce Pugsley, Effie Morgan, J. S. Morgan and others; a recita-tion by Miss Lulu Winn; piano duet by the Misses Hayward and Davis, a male chorus, and selections by the ward choir. There were also addresses by Presidents Angus M. Cannon and Ne phi L. Morris. Supper was served to all present, something like 400 people sitting down to tables burdened with wholesome food. Then there was an old-time dance, in which old and young participated till a late hour.

> Tomorrow afternoon at 2 and in the evening at 8:15, occur the final per-formances of the successful operetta of "Fanchette" in the Eighteenth ward amusement hall. The proceeds of these performances will go to the benefit o the ward fund.

more than a passable success of Stephen Brice. Mr. North is a young English-man with decided impediment in his speech which is made even more per-ceptible in his effort to disguise the accents of his mother tongue. Crabbed but good hearted, Judge Whipple found a faithful interpreter in Charles Lamb, and Thomas Hall made a capable Colonel Caryol. Jacques Martin, comedian and villain, did his best to please as Eliphalet Hopper, and he succeeded very well. The lesser parts were all in competent hands. The attendance was not as large as was anticipated but the advance sale for tonight indicates something more of a crush. "The Crisis" will close tomorrow night. There will be a Sat-urday matinee and the indications are that it will be the biggest performance of the engagement.

Tonight at the Congregational church, Mr. Alfred A. Farland, the celebrated banjo virtuoso, will again appear before a Salt Lake audience in one of his ar-tistic recitals.
