Our leading men have, there-fore, gone to these places with the view, by their presence, of restraining all practices and influences that would be injurious to the young and rising generation. Too great care cannot be exercised that liberty shall not degen-erate into license, and not to convert that which should furnish enjoyment and simple pleasure into a means of very stubborn prejudice which has been confirmed by immemorial usage and legally possesses is his own and not another's," that what a person honestly acquires Probably no portion of this law has received so much attention since its passage as the section containing what is known as the "test oath." The municipal election at Brigham City, and simple pleasure into a means of producing unhealthful excitement or immediately after the bill became law, and the pressing necessity for a de-cision on the part of those who are eligible to vote in order that they might register, forced this point in the law into immediate prominence Our ene-mies have circulated the most atro-clous falsehoods, accusing dur people of resorting to perjury when by so do-ing they could shield themselves and friends from punishment; but none hnew better than they that in making these charges they were attering de-liberate untraths. The proof of their fabilty has been witnessed in the Feder-al Courts every day during the past thrity months, when Latter-day Saints were being tried for taking care of and immediately after the bill became law, errupting morals,

Our social parties should be con-ducted in a manner to give grati-fication to all who attend them, however delicate and refined they may be in their feelings. Rude and boistarous conduct and everything of an improper character should be forbidden at such assemshould be forbidden at such assemblages. But, alas! for our country and the evil days upon which country and the evil days upon which we have fallen, this man is now re-that proper persons should be chosen, that their time and the means meces sary for their transportation be not wasted. We have a large number of young men who ought to be very suitable for missionalies. Our Sunday schools and theological classes, and our young men's mutual improvement associations, should give our young men who avait themselves of these facilities an excellent preparation for missionary labor. Every young man who has faith should be taught to co-n sider a mission to the world as an hunorable event in his life, for which > represent no discredit, and who will be useful is the labor assigned them. We suggest to the Bishops and others whose duty it is to appoint Sunday School Superintendents the great necessity of care in the selection of these officers, as on them depend, more than on any other persons, the conduct, pregress and well-being of the schools. An efficient superintend-ent implies a good schoel. Three the schools are in the selection superintend-ent implies a good schoel. poses upon them a moral obligation to make their daily walk and conversa-tion accord with their teachings. Of all lessons, the living lesson is the best. Children are surprisingly shrewd in detecting inconsistencies between the instructions and habits of their instructors. Besides, the teacher who seeks to live up to bis own advice, not only -benefits his scholars, but his teachings exert a salutary influence upon himself, and he profits by his own
