HER HOP PICKING UMBRELLA. -The Duke and Duchess of Edinburg were, it is said, recently taking a drive close in the neighbora cottage which happened to be near, and saked that an umbrella might be lent them. Au old lady, of a benevolent but yet very careful disposition, to whom this applica-tion was addressed, and the persons of her illustrious visitors were unknown, replied that if they would promise to bring it back again she would lend them her hop-picking umbrella; but she could not spare the best. Their royal highnesses gave the necessary promise, and drove away to Eastwell, where, per-haps, some little amusement was created by a recital of the adventure. The next day the borrowed article was returned with the Duchess of Edinburgh's compliments, a sovereign and a pound of good tea. The old lady has since stated that had she known it was the Duchess who had called upon her, she would certainly have lent her the best umbrella.-Newark, N. Y, Adver-
