complished without resorting to mea-sures destructive of local self-government.

If anti-Americans were inserted in place of "earnest Americans" the statement would be more consistent. This is clearly the case when it is considered that the commission are taken to task for deprecating a resort "to measures destructive of local self-government." Those are the very measures that these "earnest Americans" want. There can be no doubt in regard to their being in earnest, because public place and plunder constitute their main object in life, and they scruple at no means, however vile, that will aid them in reaching the attainment of heir desires. The majority will not elect them; therefore their chief aim is to have the majority rendered politically powerless.

An attempt is made to have it appear that the last Legislature failed to pass jaws in unison with the most recent special Congressional enactment-the Edmunds bill. All that was required by that measure so far as local legislation is concerned, was the passage of a harmonions election law, which accordingly enacted by the Legislature, but it was not in the programme of the anti-Americans to allow the act to become a law of the Territory II they could prevent it. It required the official signature of the Governor, who, being a tool of the anti-popular rule clique, refused to affix it to the measure. That is the situation of that part of the question precisely.

that part of the question precisely. The document says to the Commis-sion: Will you not also inform Congress and the country that you are forced to admit that, from all appearances, polygamy is swiftly on the increase here? Here is an extract:

Will you impress upon Congress and the country that the ballot is here intrusted to thousands who have never so much as taken an oath of allegiance to the United States, and that upon the part of the entire majority it is prostituted to the will of the first pre-sidency of the Mormon Church?

As I arose I was clothed upon with the Spirit of God, and my mind was turned toward the young people who had met us the evening before; and the old and young, and the consideration that should be shown him. He also touched upon some of the causes following is a synopsis of some of the remarks which I made. As I am call-ed upon this morning to address this assemblage my mind leads me to speak which inducej men to grow cold or luke-warm in the faith, and of the need of encouraging such and keeping them assemblage my mind leads me to speak to the young people who are before me. I wish to say to my young friends, last evening as we came into this town, we met you parading in the street, to pay proper respect to Presi-dent Young and his party. You met to gr et Prophets, Apostles and inspired men. This is a privilege which no other generation of young people have enjoyed for eighteen hundred years, until Joseph Smith the Prophet was raised up to lay the foundation of the Church and Kingdom of God on the earth: a privilege for which I would have felt amply repaid if I had had to travel a thousand miles in the days of my boyhood on foot to have witnessed. Now my young friends I wish you to in the pathway of right and duty; and he urged the teachers to emulate the course pursued, perhaps by themselves as Elders on missions, and be as much interested in the welfare of the Saints after they are gathered to Zion as they were before they reached here. A teacher should be as anxious to report good as evil, where it exists, and bear and forbear with human weakness, nore solicitous to save and rescue souls than have them cut off the Church and destroyed. The spirit of compassion and charity should be exhibited, as well as stern justice, and always in preference to harshness and intolerince. A teacher should be in possession of my boyhood on foot to have witnessed. Now my young friends I wish you to remember these scenes which you are witnessing during the visit of Presi-dent Young and his orethren Yea, my young friends, treasure up the teach-ings and tayings of these prophets, and apostles as precious treasure while they are living men, and do not wait until they are dead. A few days and President Young and his brethren, the prophets and apos-tles and Brothers Benson and Maughan, will be in the spirit world. You should never forget this visitation. You are to become that spirit which will prompt him where to go, even to the house of an outsider, if there he can do good. A teacher may be tempted to say, "I am a poor man, have to work for my living, and am not paid for being a teach-cr." The speaker said he could not say that he had ever labored gratulthis visitation.
