THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

Everything Encouraging.

WASHINGTON, 12.—Secretary Kirkwood, this afternoon, received the following telegram from Long Branch, signed by Secretary Hunt and Postmaster General James: "Everything is encouraging. The President looks much better. He passed a good night and his symptoms are favorable."

The Source of Anxiety.

McVeagh to Lowell:

ELBERON, Sept. 12, 10 p. m.

In the absence of Secretary Blaine, the attending physicians have requested me to inform you of the President's condition. He has, during the day, eaten sufficient food with a relish, and enjoyed at intervals a refreshing sleep. His wound and the incisions look better. The parotid gland has ceased suppuration and may be considered substantially well. He has shown more than usual cheerfulness of spirit. Temperature and respiration are now normal, and pulse less frequent and firmer than at the same hour last evening. Notwithstanding these favorable symptoms, the condition of the lower part of the right lung will continue to be a source of anxiety for some days to come.

McVeagh Feels Relieved.

ELBERON, 13.—McVeagh is much encouraged and says the surgeons are confident that the alarming features of the lung trouble are passing away. Everything looks more encouraging and I feel much relieved.

Bliss said: The President is better. He had a good night's rest, which is having a good effect. He eats freely and had some milk punch, with brandy. His lung affection is nearly or quite under control. Everything looks favorable again.

James and Windom went to New York this morning. Hunt called, to-day, and was very favorably impressed with the President's condition.

An Abscess of the Right Lung.

Boynton says it is one of the President's brightest days. Doubtless there is an abscess on the right lung, but not very aggravating. It is not worse now than before he left Washington. It is caused by chronic blood poisoning.

Bliss Says there is No Abscess.

To-day has been favorable throughout, according to the attending physicians, and the President is pronounced again on the road to recovery. Much surprise and comment is occasioned by the sudden fluctuations of the patient, but the surgeons insist that this is to be expected, if weather affects him in any degree. This has certainly been a good day, as the air has been pure and comparatively dry. According to statements of attending surgeons the pulse was from 110 at noon to 100 at the evening dressing, and temperature from 99.2 at noon to 98.6 in the evening, showing there was comparatively no fever at 6 o'clock this evening. The cabinet early received assurance there was no immediate danger, and that the threatened relapse has apparently passed away and then followed the reception of Attorney-General MacVeagh and Secretary Kirkwood, the former remaining here and the latter being in Washington left at different hours for New York, whence they go direct to the White Mountains for a few days recreation. Bliss said this was one of the good days; that the President was decidedly better, and that he had expressed himself as feeling improved on several occasions. The doctor is very positive in his statement to-night that all fears of the formation of a pus cavity on the right lung have passed away, and that he has reason to believe the cause of the dullness indicated in the lower portion of the organ, is under control; at least, he said, it is no worse, and I think better to-night. If there was a formation of abscess, the doctor maintained, it would necessarily cause the temperature to rise, whereas it has fallen. The doctor said Dr. Agnew was perfectly in accord with him in entertaining that opinion. When asked to what he attributed the symptoms manifested by the lung in the daily soundings, the doctor took the same grounds as he did last night, holding it was caused by a wound on the track of the ball; that it was limited to lobular inflammation, and that it would be overcome by the President's vitality.

He was very emphatic in his remarks to-night, that there were no indications of an abscess, and he believed now that the lung affection had not assumed any greater proportions since he came here. It had been noticed more than three weeks ago. Referring to the glandular complications, the doctor said, that is practically well; there is still a small opening in the last incision, but it is getting along very satisfactory, and the swelling has entirely subsided. The cough has improved. The doctor says the patient now expectorates without being annoyed with a hacking cough. He recently expressed it that he had coughed but very little during the day, and each time raised a considerable quantity of mucous, to which he attributed the whole trouble.

Pulse 106.

6 p. m.—The President has experienced, since the issue of the morning bulletin, further amelioration of symptoms. He has been able to take an ample amount of food without discomfort and has had several refreshing naps. At the noon examination the temperature was 99.2, pulse 106, respiration 20. At 5 30 p. m. the temperature was 98 6, pulse 100, respiration 19.

Hallucination.

Col. Rockwell gave to Murat Halstead, of the Cincinnati Commercial, a detailed statement of the President's condition. His tone was unchanged from the utterances made by him yesterday, and he said in substance there was no rubbing out the fact that the President was better; that he heeded his surroundings and took interest in outside matters; that he ate with relish and properly assimilated his food. The President likes the ocean. Of course he has his ups and downs, but his tide was now on the flood. He did not doubt there was every indication he was well on the road to recovery. He had heretofore had some annoyance with his eyes, but that had apparently disappeared. The Colonel was asked if it was a fact that the President still suffered any hallucination upon awakening, to which he responded he had been troubled more or less for some time past, with a sort of temporary bewilderment, "nothing more serious, however," said he, "than many well persons experience upon awakening from a sound sleep." The Colonel said in this connection, it was a serious error to refer to this matter as delirium, inasmuch as it was invariably temporary and the patient was always conscious of it, and he (Col. Rockwell) instanced his action at such times by saying he would not address any of his attendants, who might be standing near him, until the seeming cloud had passed away. He attributed the occurrant of hallucination, if such it could be properly termed, to the low condition of the system, as Gen. Garfield was never subject to such attacks when well.

The Best of Ten Days.

The conversation continued at some length and was apparently gratifying to the listeners in consequence of it being frankly and seriously entered into by all concerned. The Colonel summed up with the remark that the President was better now than he had been for ten days at least.

The Shot at Guiteau.

WASHINGTON, 12.—Another attempt was made last night to kill the assassin Guiteau. There is reason to believe that a few days ago there was some talk among the soldier, detailed to guard him, in regard to which one of them should be chosen to shoot at him whenever he should present his head at the window of his cell where it could be seen from the outside. It was decided that the work should be done by Sergeant John A. Mason, of Company B, Second Artillery, and he made preparations for it. This evening three wagon loads of soldiers left the arsenal for the jail to relieve the day guards. Mason was in the first wagon and his companions noticed that he was fumbling with the lock of his gun and was acting strangely. Nothing was said to him about it however. When his wagon reached the jail Mason was to get out. He pushed forward, reached a small hillock, about three feet from where the horses stood, brought his gun to his shoulder, took steady aim at Guiteau's window, shouting "There he is!" and fired. Before the smoke cleared away the other soldiers gathered around him.

"In Heaven's name, man," cried Private Davis, "why did yo shoot?"

"I wanted to kill that wretch in there," was the reply, and I have been at it for ten days, I hope I have done the work in good style."

Mason then walked toward the commanding officer, Captain McGilorsy, saying.

"Captain, I have tried to kill that dirty loafer in there Here is my gun and bayonet, take me in charge."

McGilorsy had heard the shot but had not dreamed of Mason's intentions. He placed Mason in the charge of two soldiers. There was much excitement about the jail and inside of it. The prisoners who had heard the shot ran to the windows and shouted to Warden Crocker and his deputy, who had been in the jail office. They ran through the corridors to Guiteau's cell and found him on his knees, terror stricken.

"Do they want to murder me?" he asked.

The warden assured him he need have no fear.

"But I've been shot at," said the prisoner. "I was standing at my window when one of those soldiers fired at me; the ball passed by my ear, went through my coat, hanging up there, and cut in pieces the photograph of my mother which was in the pocket."

The warden discovered that the ball had not hit the prisoner's body, and then he went outside to see who had fired the shot It was agreed that it would be best to tell Guiteau that the shooting was accidental. This announcement was made to him, the explanation being that a soldier in getting out of the wagon had accidentally discharged his gun. It was decided that Guiteau should be removed to another cell, and he was placed in one formerly occupied by Stone, who murdered his wife.

No official notice of Mason's offence has yet been reported at the War Department. It is stated that Mason will be promptly surrendered if demand is made for him by the civil authorities. If such demand is not made, Mason will be tried by court-martial. Army officers generally express a feeling of mortification at this attempt on Guiteau's life as reflecting on the discipline and good name of the service.

Guiteau's Version.

Guiteau has told ten different stories about his position when Sergeant Mason fired into his cell last night. At first, and when under excitement, he said he was standing at the window, but it is believed that his first statement is true, and that he concerted the second with the idea that it would give him more notoriety if he made it appear that he had a very narrow escape. This is not the first time that Guiteau has given reason since he was imprisoned, to believe that he does not always tell the truth. His account of the shooting as near as given to Warden Crocker was as follows: It was a close call, and walking to the window he pointed to a hole in the outer glass and said: You see that? Well, I saw the wagons when they came out. It was raining then, and I was looking at the soldiers getting out of them. I had my arms in this position, putting one arm over near the elbow and resting them on the first bar of the cell and my chin was resting on them, when I saw the flash right from that corner, indicating the south corner of the west window, and near this was a ball crashing and passing over here, pointing over his shoulders. See here, the ball came in right here, pointing to a spot on the wall. It was a powerful shot, for after it glanced it went right through my coat which was hanging on this nail; see what it done. This picture (pulling out one of the photographs taken of him in which the left breast is completely torn out) I had some other things, tooth-picks, etc., it did not touch. I want to keep the picture as a memento. Gen. Crocker said: There was a good aim at the heart of the picture; yes, but I would rather have it there than in mine. I don't know who did it. A guard remarked: It looks like it was an accident. Guiteau made no reply, but evidently did not take any stock in the suggestion. Sergeant Mason is said by the officers to be the best shot in the company. He says that he had observed that every evening when the guard arrived Guiteau took the same position in the cell, under the window, but he could not fire a direct shot from that position. He had to round the yard to get a position at another place in order to command the range of Guiteau's cell window. Mason did not stop at his usual place to see if Guiteau was at the window, but as he had never failed to be there when the guard arrived, Mason took it for granted that the prisoner was at the window, and hurried on to where he could get range and fired, without attending to his aim to make it certain that Guiteau was in range.

There is reason for believing that Guiteau tells lies. They do not understand how he knew when his birthday arrived. The guards say he is an unconscionable liar about the most trival matters. He was in great terror lest he should be murdered. The guards passing the cell frequently heard him praying during the night. He is evidently an arrant coward. He tells a falsehood in saying that he was at the window, as from where the shot was fired he must have been hit had he stood there. Guiteau has been removed to another cell, and its location in the jail is kept a profound secret. Neither the military or officers other than those who are on duty in that particular portion of the building know where it is. About noon to-day Guiteau took up his abode in his new quasters.

There will be no court martial in the case of Sergeant Mason. His offense is one against military, not civil law; it is not thought at the War Department that there will be any trial at all. The opinion that Mason was not in his right mind when he did the firing is prevalent among the officials of the War Department. The civil authorities may move in the matter and prosecute Mason, but it is not thought they will. The district attorney has not taken any action, and says he has had no official notification of the shooting. Guiteau keeps his reckoning of time by making a little notch in a piece of candle he has for each day that passes.

Sergeant Mason who shot at Guiteau is still imprisoned. There is some doubt as to jurisdiction. It is not believed he was drunk or wild from drink. Although no plot for the killing of Guiteau was discovered among the guards it is known that they are deeply hostile toward him. The officers believed Guiteau lied and was not at the window, but when fired at Guiteau exhibited some agony of fear.

It was decided to furnish the Governor at once with the needed supply of arms to be distributed among the people in that portion of the Territory threatened with invasion. Governor Fremont left for Arizona to-night.

Thief Bateman Bagged.

NEW YORK, 12.—John F. Bateman, aged 26, clerk in the employ of Taylor & Brutin, bankers and bullion merchants, Leadville, robbed his employers of silver bullion to the amount of $1,300 in the beginning of the month, and fled to this city. He carried bullion valued at $1,000, and his wife had preceded him with $300 worth. The Leadville police advised Inspector Byrnes about it. They ascertained that a lady styling herself Mrs. Bateman, of Clifton, Staten Island, had deposited silver to the amount of $1,300 at the assay office to be assayed and stamped. The officers secured the property and found Mrs. Bateman's house in Clifton, watched it, and last night arrested Bateman himself. His wife was not found.

King Kalakaua.

A Tribune reporter interviewed Armstrong, King Kalakaua's attorney-General, who arrived from Europe yesterday. Armstrong said the King will soon arrive here. He will stay two weeks in the Eastern States, and then go to Virginia, Kentucky and San Francisco in October. He will sail from San Francisco for his kingdom. The King was much surprised at the grandeur, power and wealth of England, but he was most pleased with the grand display that was made over him in Japan.

Railroad Pass.

SAN FRANCISCO, 12.—A Lewiston, Idaho, dispatch says: Maj. Truax and party, who went out to examine the approaches to Lolo Pass, at the Bitterroot Mountains for railroad purposes, arrived here last night. He reports the route up Lolo Ford, of the Clear Water, to within 15 miles of the summit, as good, the maximum grade at no point exceeding 50 feet per mile, and the maximum grade of no point on the last 15 miles exceeds 100 feet per mile, and he believes this can be reduced to 75 or 80 feet. From the summit east to Bitterroot River, was an easy grade. Another party is viewing out another pass to the south of this, that is claimed to be several hundred feet lower, called Skakaso. On examination Truax has dispelled the theory of the Northern Pacific surveyors, who asserted that no railroad pass existed south of Pendeorelle. This will shorten the railroad line from Ainsworth east to the mouth of Bitterroot River to Missoula over 100 miles.

Sharp's Carbines.

A Tucson dispatch says: Colonel Biddle, commanding operations in the field, troops M, Sixth cavalry, and Lieut. Clark, Sixth cavalry, arrived at Thomas to-day, having come over the trail from the direction of Fort Apache. The citizens of Prescott have organized a militia company. Twenty-five Hualapais have been enlisted as scouts, and will join Colonel Price commanding the district of Verde. Price is now moving with his command through Tonto Basin toward Cibicu, where the fight with Carr's command occurred. Lieutenant Gale Woods has enlisted fifty Indian scouts at the agency, and is moving with Captain Tupper, commanding troop G, Sixth cavalry, toward Apache. Fifty Sharps or Springfield carbines with 10,000 rounds of ammunition have been ordered to each of the following points: Forts McDowell, Bowie, Grant, Lowell and Willcox station. They will be sold to citizens.

The Indian War.

A dispatch from Tucson, Arizona, says the Citizen has the following from Thomas and Col. Biddle, arrived from Apache yesterday en route to Wilcox: Clark arrived yesterday with his company of scouts, who are to be mustered out at Fort Gillore, accompanied by Frank Bennet, chief of scouts, who enlisted thirty-five Indian scouts at Carlos, twenty of them being Yumas and Navajoes and fifteen Tonto and agency Apaches. They left this morning for New Mexico. S. French, a stock rancher, living eighteen miles above Apache, now here, ascertained by telegraph last night, that his wife and six children had taken refuge at Cooly's ranch. The Indians had driven off 400 head of stock and sixty horses. At Cooly's ranch there are now thirty white families and 150 Indian squaws and children guarded by friendly Indians. Yesterday Capt. Ramers and Company E, of the Sixth, commanded by Lieut. Stanton, left for Apache. Major Tupper's company is under marching orders. Col. Scully, Post Quartermaster, is building a large ferry boat to enable troops to cross the Gila river readily, which would indicate renewed activity. Lieut. Gatewood, with a company of scouts, is expected here.
