SILK AND TAN COAT FOR GENERAL WEAR.

It is true that dark blues, black and browns may be more serviceable than the lighter tans and grays, but they are not half so pretty in themselves, nor as becoming to the small wearer as tan or gray in an outer garment. It need not necessarily be a light gray or tan, rather a medium tone which goes well with practically every color of dress and is becoming to almost every type of child, blond or brunette. The new fall models are quite devoid of trimmings, except in the way of applications of self bands and smart attachments. They are especially true of the more practical garments for everyday wear. They are double breasted with roll collar and revers like a man's coat. This model has strapings of the cloth running from the shoulders to the hem, both back and front, the back straps overlapping the front while perhaps not heavy enough for the severest of winter weather, may be made so by the addition of an inner lining, or the wearing of one of those serviceable sweaters.

In Women's World.

In the great Canadian Northwest, where the erstwhile wilderness is waving with golden grain and towns are springing up overnight, not a few women have gone to seek their fortunes alone. A homestead grant of 160 acres is free, and any "head of a family," man or woman, may secure it upon application to the Canadian government. Usually, of course, the applicant is a man, but occasionally a woman essays to make her fortune on the prairies without masculine aid.

Miss Marie Gilroy, of Saskatchewan is one of the most famous women settlers of the West. She put her last shilling into a prairie farm and spent seven years in a hand-to-hand tussle with fortune, sitting on her own binder, cutting her own grain, handling the plow in the furrow and doing stable duty. In 1906 her holding excited the admiration of a young Englishman, and Miss Gilroy was induced to hand over lock, stock and barrel to him for the round sum of $15,000. Today Miss Gilroy is touring Europe on the proceeds of her original $2,000.

Mrs. McGilvary, who came to the Canadian West 20 years ago with six small children, is another prominent woman farmer of Saskatchewan. Beginning almost penniless, for her 160 acres of homestead have now grown to an 80-acre estate, and her children are settled around her in comfort and affluence.

Salome Wertman came with her husband and little family from Russia, and soon she, too, was a widow. She still kept on "trying to earn bread," as she says, and sixteen years after her absolute penniless start she stands as one of the successful land owners of Saskatchewan.

Mrs. Ferris is known as the "woman farmer" of the Portage Plains. Left with a family of young children, she has managed her farm most successfully since the death of her husband. She comes from Belfast, Ireland, and when she arrived in Western Canada, they had no capital at all. She now has an estate of 700 acres, and her two sons are settled near at hand, each the owner of a half section of land—about 500 acres.

It is seldom one hears of a woman stenographer or private secretary selling information that she has gained, and she should be given credit for it. Some of those who have not so much faith in the honor of women, indeed, it is because women are more afraid of consequences of a dishonorable act than men, but there are men who could tell a different story, too. There are many women employees in the confidence of employers who trust them with information with which no man employed would be trusted.

Mildred D. Peters is a mechanical genius. She is a Wisconsin woman, and has been working for more than three years in the Rice Lake Works, a foundry and machine shop owned by her husband, Mrs. Peters having a natural talent for doing the various sorts of work required in a machine shop. She is a competent worker among engines, familiar with all their intricacies, and can manufacture as well as run them. She has special skill in turning out clean castings, doing all the handling of the hot metal herself, and can even make her own patterns. Her husband declares: "My wife is capable of taking entire charge of the business. She can do anything that I can do in the shop."

Lady Somerses's retiring from the platform is to gain time to devote to practical means of reformation. "I believe I can do more good through the industrial colony at Duxhurst, in Sussex, than by talking," she remarked recently. "The day for talking is over for me. More practical work can be done behind the scenes. Cheap clap-trap does nothing to advance big principles."

The French government has entrusted to Mme. Laurence Fiedler of Paris a mission to make an exhaustive investigation into the social and industrial conditions of women and children in America. The purpose of her work, Mme. Fiedler says, is to raise the standard of women's wages in France, as well as the social standard of her countrywomen in every department of industrial and commercial work.

The wife of the great Russian reformer, Count Tolstoy, is of Jewish origin, a highly educated woman, speaking English, French and German almost as fluently as her native tongue. She prepares all the count's books for the press and it is said that she is the only person who can decipher her famous husband's handwriting.

Mrs. Ruth Jewett Burgess, wife of John W. Burgess, Roosevelt professor at the University of Berlin, will paint a portrait of Prince Augustus Wilhelm, fourth son of Emperor Wilhelm of Germany. Mrs. Burgess is a native of Montpelier, Vt. She has studied for the last ten years in Europe. Her copies of portraits of Emperor William have introduced her to the German royal family, and the commission to paint the prince's portrait is the result.

It is no exaggeration to say that a more or less truthful woman is looked upon with grave suspicion. What is more, nobody believes her.

If she quite truthfully pronounces her age to be 29, everybody at once says that she must be at least 35, while if she should ever be caught into admitting the number of proposals she had in her youth it will only confirm the popular impression that she had been very lucky to catch a husband at all.

Mrs. James A. Bailey, wife of the late "circus king," has contributed very liberally to charity and has lately given $100,000 to erect a hospital at Mt. Vernon, N. Y. It is to be a memorial to her husband, who had done very much for the little town in which the hospital will be erected.

In Women's World.

Basket weaving is yet in its infancy here at home, but what a charming art it is! In the south sea islands it is an occupation largely affected by the women and children—little tots of tender years becoming quite adepts in the craft. Some baskets recently brought from the Fiji and other islands show a beauty of design and skill in workmanship which it would be difficult to excel. They were made of the native flax sometimes dyed, often left in the natural tint, woven together in the most charming styles and shapes. Then the woven seeds of a swamp plant are strung while soft after being water-soaked and the strands woven into the most beautiful forms. Sometimes the flax, which grows from seven to nine feet tall in those countries, is stripped and so highly finished it looks like silk; the baskets and other articles made from this are the most exquisite of all.

A simple manner of treatment for enlarged pores. Twice a week omit the usual soap and water facial bath. Use instead equal parts of bay rum and oil of sweet almonds. This removes all dust from the pores and has an as stringent effect on the skin itself.

The too common custom of "drinking health" had a most curious origin. In the days when the Danes lived in England they had a very common habit of stabbing Englishmen in the throat when drinking. To avoid this villainy a man when drinking would request some of the steez-by to be his pledge, or security, while taking his draught. Hence the custom.

THIS DRESS CAN BE WORN ALL THROUGH THE WINTER.

The jumper dress is evidently to be a favorite model this fall and winter, for many frocks of this mode are seen in the early lines of fall wear. In the early autumn, when the weather is too cool for late summer dresses and yet too moderate for dresses of winter materials, the jumper dress is the most practical that can be selected for either every day or dressy wear. Plaid serges are very effective developed along these lines and worn with plain white tailored guimpes of linen or some other heavier weight wash fabric. The dress is very simple, being what might be called a tailored frock, for all the seams are stitched flat, as are also the plaits in the shoulders, which make a becoming fullness at the waistline, and the cap sleeves slashed in the back are devoid of trimming except for three buttons on the top of the arm and machine stitchings. The neck is cut rounding and the jumper fastened in the front at the left side with a cluster of four bone buttons. The colors of the plaid are green and blue over-plaided with white.
