MONK SUIT DISMISSED.

The $25,000 Damage Case Against Ex-Sheriff Lewis, Fails.

In Judge Morse's court yesterday afternoon the $25,000 damage case of James T. Monk against former Sheriff Thomas B. Lewis and his bondsmen, was dismissed on motion of the plaintiff's attorney and at his cost. The suit was commenced four years ago to recover damages for alleged inhuman treatment of the plaintiff, while he was confined in the county jail for contempt of court in refusing to produce the records of the Big Cottonwood mining district. Monk alleged that he had been subjected to "sweating," close confinement, and other ill-treatment so inhuman that he had suffered $25,000 damages.

How much was paid by the defendants to the plaintiff to have the case called off is not known, but it is stated that the sum is insignificant in comparison with the amount sued for. The other defendants were Alexander Tarbet, Ben Harmon, William Harker, Simon Bamberger, Elias Morris, R. K. Thomas and A. H. Raleigh, all on the $25,000 bond of Sheriff Lewis.

TO CLOSE SALOONS ON THE SABBATH

ON THE SABBATH

Steps Taken by Council in That Direction Last Night.

Chief Hilton's Statement

Has Been, He Says, Under the Impression That the City Fathers Were Intended.

Is the Sunday closing law to be enforced at last? Are the untiring efforts of the moral forces of the city finally to be crowned with success? It would appear so, if, indeed, the resolution passed by the Council last night sitting as a committee of the whole is an earnest of what that body really intends to do.

The Cottrell resolution regarding the closing of the drink palaces has been staved off by the Council till it refused to be pushed aside any further. The better class of people were clamoring and agitating for action in the matter, and the council was per force, at last, compelled to heed them.

It was after 10 o'clock last night when the momentous question of compelling the saloon men to observe the Sabbath by keeping closed their drink shops during that day, came to an issue. There was a long and wordy debate, but the losing resolution finally triumphed by a vote of eight to one.

Councilman Robertson of the Fifth, being the only voice that was raised against it. According to the resolution, the saloon men were to be closed during that day, and the Mayor will be instructed to see to it that the ordinance relative to the sale of liquor on Sunday is rigidly enforced. No more sneaking in at side doors will be tolerated.

The chief made the statement to the Council last night that a committee of the Deseret Sunday school had called on him regarding the closing of saloons on Sundays and the sale of liquor and tobacco to minors. "I stated that there had been numerous occasions," continued the chief, "when it had been tried to enforce the law against the sale of liquor on Sunday. Instead of promoting the moral interests of the city, it had had the contrary effect, and the records showed that during the time of the supposed closing there were more arrests for drunkenness on the Sabbath than there were before or after. For years the saloons have been conducted as at present, that is with the front doors closed on Sunday. Personally, I do not refuse to do anything, but the council has decided that the front doors be in vogue for years and no objection has been raised. The silence of the Council gave me the idea that everything was satisfactory. I believe that the council is in as good or better moral condition with regard to the sale of liquor as it has been for the last twelve years."

The members of the Council put a great many questions to Chief Hilton before the vote was taken on the Cottrell resolution. Answering these he said that there had never been any specific complaint to the police that the Sunday closing law was being violated. Cottrell contended that the side-door system enhanced the evil, and asked the chief if he did not think it would be better to keep the front doors open. The chief thought that if there were no ordinance to keep the doors closed the police would lose control over the saloon liquor traffic, and he stated the reason that more men were arrested for Sunday drunkenness was that on Sunday the police would not allow any man to stagger on the streets.

Councilman Bell proposed that the window blinds in saloons be thrown open on the Sabbath. There was an order to keep the blinds in Denver and it seemed to work well. When a man is drunk he is liable to get into a fight, and if he is seen by the police he will be arrested. The chief thought that if there were no ordinance to keep the doors closed the police would lose control over the saloon liquor traffic, and he stated the reason that more men were arrested for Sunday drunkenness was that on Sunday the police would not allow any man to stagger on the streets.
