Some doubt is expressed to night whether the Bank hill will be finally passed tefore Saturday. To-morrow is private bill day, and a majority of the democrats want the regular order to prevail. Last Friday the bank bill was called up, and Randall then successfully led the fill-bustering movement which lasted two hours. Private business or no business was the democrats' flat, and the result a deadlock. No business was transacted, while there are quite a number of democrats who desire the bank bill disposed of as soon as possible. The majority soon as possible. The majority have been restrained with difficulty from filibustering against its passage and they may be able to successfully prevent action upon it for at least with declaring the bill a fatal prevent action upon it for at least one day. If the republicans will move the Mackey O'Connor case as soon as the bank bill is put away.

The members of both parties anticipate a bitter fight over this case. The democrats have decided to fill-buster against it and the repression bill in on was that declaring the bill in on was that declaring the bill in on was that declaring the bill a factorist tranquility.

O'Donnell denounced the bill.

Calthurst, the liberal member County Cork, supported the bill.

There is a strong feeling on the majority side, however, that Mackey, O'Connor and other contested election cases must be acted upon at the present session, mainly for the political effect which the settlement of the cases in favor of the contestants his teat. Kasson the bill passed providing any person being originally a citizen of the United States who has republicans will not surrender the control of public business to the minority without a long and bitter struggle, and not until it is apparent that a quorum o' their members can not be obtained. The leaders on both sides appear willing at the present time to lay aside important business to make or lose the little political effect upon the approaching election.
