Miss Lehan Spencer gave a doll party this afternoon at her home on East First South street. The afternoon was spent in a doll-dressing contest, prizes being awarded the maker of the prettiest costume. Among the acceptances was the following in verse, which is clever enough to be read by other eyes than the hostess:

"Your sweet invitation just reached us today. Not even wild horses could keep us away. Will anything else with that interfere? Not on your tynpse, we're sure to be there."

We hardly can wait to enjoy the rare treat. We don't know the number, but do know the street.

Your note says at two, but we might raise some fun. So rather than that we will be there at one.

You suggest we bring dollies and needle and thread. If not rude, we could bring something else in their stead.

We have dreaming to do, that needs doing sore. Of overalls, shirts and pant buttons galore.

Table cloths, carpets and such things we might bring. We might bring the roof, it sadly needs shining.

The patching and darning it seems are near ending. We might bring our fortunes, they greatly need mending.

We'd like you to know the chief thing we'll bring. Will be empty stomachs; we won't eat a thing.

From now 'til the day you have asked us to dine. Though one of us, Pop says, has got a "tape line."

The thing that gave rise to that yarn, know the worst. Was an overlarge meal caused a waist said.

"We must excuse her she's eating for two. So it passed to a family legend, in time

That's the whole of the story about the "tape line." We're so glad we're invited to be at the fete. It seems a long time though that we have to wait. Just think, it's four days, my! they never will go. We never remember time dragging so slow. Charming the sweet things kind Providence sends. Are the place we hold in the hearts of our friends. 'Tis a foretaste of Heaven that comes to us then. And tells us that some time we'll all meet again. The wine press of life though with three feet tread Gives us rest, friends, and love, in the bosom of God. Phyllis and Dorothy.

OGDEN SOCIAL NEWS

One of the most brilliant social events of the year took place Thursday evening, November 21, when Miss Minnie Spiegel, a most charming young lady of Portland, Oregon, was united in marriage with Mr. Carl Kuhn, one of Ogden's well known young business men. The pretty home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Morris Hardman, No. 2341 Adams avenue was the scene of the elaborate affair, which had been anticipated with great pleasure by social circles of the city. At the appointed hour, 8:30 o'clock in the evening, an orchestra played Mendelssohn's wedding march and the wedding party entered the spacious double parlors. The first to enter were Mr. Charles Kluhner, Mr. William Shealey, Mr. Oscar Kuhn and Mr. Edward Rosenbaum, who acted as ushers. They were followed by little Walter Hardman, who carried the ring, next came Miss Laura Spiegel, sister of the bride, as bride's maid, and then the bride on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Morris Hardman. They took their places under a canopy of evergreens from which hung a large wedding veil, being joined here by the groom and Mr. Arthur Kuhn, who was best man. District Judge Rolapp, in a short but very impressive ceremony, pronounced them man and wife. During the evening the orchestra played sweet pieces, and as the last words were spoken by the judge, two satin ribbons were pulled and a shower of sweet scented flowers poured forth from the interior of the floral bell down upon the bride and groom.

PROVO SOCIAL NEWS.

Provo, Nov. 22.—Major R. W. Young entertained the Parents' club Wednesday evening with a most interesting talk on "The Philippines." He gave a brief description of the physical condition of the islands, and told of the habits, customs, social conditions and political aspirations of the natives. Major Young spoke of the efforts of the Filipinos to achieve independence from the Spanish government, and explained that the desire for independence was strong among the people who follow Aguinaldo, although the latter informed and more intelligent, realize that the people are not strong enough to maintain a government, that can protect itself from internal enemies and foreign invasions. The anxiety of the Filipinos to learn the English language and the progress made in the schools, and their aptness in learning all mechanical pursuits was favorably commented on.

CLUB CHAT.

Tuesday afternoon the regular meeting of the Woman's club was held at the club rooms in the county building. After the business meeting, Mrs. A. B. Kinney gave an interesting talk on Peter the Great, from his birth to the grave. She prefaced her remarks with the statement that a careful examination of his life work left one in doubt as to his greatness. That the flattering stories of his precociousness, his genius and courage, were legends. His debauchery and cruelty were something awful, especially at the revolt of the Strelitzs, all of whom he ordered put to death, assisting the executioners with his own hands. He pardoned only a few—young Orlov among them. After Ivan, in 1689, abdicated his share of the government, the new czar—aided by his able minister—reorganized the army, built a small navy, went to sea in person in a Dutch and English ship to learn the practical part of navigation. He realized his ambition of gaining for Russia a port on the Black sea. In 1695 his plan to go abroad resulted in a discovery that he would not be received. After his unsuccessful war against the Turks, the history of Peter the Great begins. Peter was the most complete, comprehensive, diversified personality that has ever appeared—Russia's historic type personified in a simple character, he contains the collective qualities of the native, the good, the bad, the height and depth of its moral scale. From his tours in Europe he gleaned much that was good, and brought back with him many books and works of art, reformed the calendar, progressed made in the schools, and their aptness in learning all mechanical pursuits was favorably commented on.

BROADTAIL AND CHINCHILLA.

The costly and frail broadtail is still the favorite fur of elegant women. As black against the face is trying, a fur must be found exquisite enough to mate with the broadtail and used as a collar and reverses. Chinchilla is the only fur really appropriate for the purpose and has this year taken the precedence of mink for trimmings.
