We do not desire to do the lady, nor any other person, an injustice, preferring to let facts tell their own tale. - Facts are very stubborn. We could not help suggesting to Mrs. Newman, that while her ideas appeared to be broad in regard to the scope of the proposed Home, its opelations were drawn in to a very fine point. The contracting power was the law authorizing the appropriation of $40,000 for a specific purpose. It is more than likely that when the act of Congress and the ideas of Mrs. Newman conflict the latter are not liable to prevail, to any appreciable extent. Strong in this view we assured the lady of our belief that not a dollar of that appropriation could be legally used for the support of an institution such as she had so fluently described. "I have ascertained through a care-ful series of observations," he said, 'that women who read the newspapers are int rested in four subjects-scan-dals, marriages, deaths and efiquette. Take any woman in town and toss a paper in her lap while she is working paper in her lap while she is working on a 'splasher' depicting the everiast-ing 'Three Little Maids,' or is engaged in some equally absorbing work, and what does she do? First she glances along the headlines until she comes to the Victoria Morosini episode. She at once drops her work, taps her teeth meditatively with her thimble, and wades through every word of the re-nort. The moral she draws from the

ABOUT FIVE o'clock last evening, Bryant, a 12-year-old son of Mr. 'r. J. Stevens, City Recorder, met with port. The moral she draws from the port. The moral she draws from the story is usually that she doesn't see why so much just is made about that dorosint creature, whom she saw one night on the stage of the Cashao and found to be as, awkward as a cow. Then she stops abruptly and skims over the paper till she finds the column between the the she reveals for headed 'Deaths.' Here she revels for a long while, wondering if the John-son who has just died is any relation to the Johnson who boarded at the elbow. Dr. Carnahan reduced the second farm house down the turnpike near the cross-roads from where she spent the summer in Connecticut four years ago. After arguing this over for some time, and settling it positively one way or the other, she goes on to the next name. If she dis-covers the death of a child she divines TO-DAY the daughter of Mr. Daulel Evans, of this place, came near losing who is only about a year and a half old, was playing around and fell into a st once that it was scarlet fever, and Was it the purpose of the law to up-at all the rules of jurisprudence com-alarmed the neighbors, who soon the science in the science of the to the marriage column. Did you ever see anything more amusing than the absorption of the woman over the mar-riages? An earthquake wouldn't dis-turb her. She invests every couple with the romanca of her own courtship, and roes off into speculations on ship, and roes on into specificions on the groom's prospects and the style of the bride's wedding outfit. As for the etiquette column, that always makes her chatter. 'Here,' she says, 'is the most absurd young woman who writes to the editor to know whether she ought to go to a theatre with her young man without a chaperone. I remem-ber the first time dear Henry took n e to the theatre, and so on. After she has waded through this column she throws the paper aside, and that night when her husband comes home she tells how much she was interested she tells now much she was interested in the newspaper. 'Yes,' he says, 'the papers are mighty readable now. That was an awful catastrophe, in Charles-ton, wasn't it?' His wife looks up at him and says: 'What was that, dear?! 'Why, the earthquake.' 'Was there one? Well, there, that stupid old pa-per didn't have a word about.' The busherd goes and gots the paper and husband goes and gets the paper and shows her a six-column article on the first page. She had not seen it, of course. Now, there's a pointer for any man with brains," continued the projector of newspapers, "somewhat out of breats, but very much in ear-nest, "and I'm going to work it out.
