But little of the stream which leaves the ordan is now wasted, and what slight leakage still occurs will be fully remedied in time, as the water gradually settles and solidifies the bed of the canal. It is a well known fact that among the uplands, or bench lands of this region, during the summer months, it takes time for the soil, which is very absorbent in its nature, to become properly saturated so as to allow water to pass freely along the surface. THIS morning, a NEWS reporter, accompanied by Watermuster Chas. H. We confidently predict its triumph, aud are certain it is close at hand. In the meantime, respectable citizens should cease to pay any attention to the wilful falsehoods circulated by a few unprincipled parties, whose profession is to tell lies, and whose sole aim as residents of the community is to matign its noblest citizens, discourage its worthy enterprises, and clog the wheels of progress in every right direction.

The sad event was the result of typho-majarial fever, from which the lade had been suffering for about a month. The deceased was well beloved and highly respected by all who knew her, and leaves besides her husband and two children, a host of sincere friends to mourn her untimely departure. We urged him to get medical advice, under which he seemed to improve until last night, when his nervous system completely gave way. We called in Drs. Ayers and Flint, who with the physicians attending him did all in their power to save him, but he commenced to sink from three o'clock till 7.40. when he quietly passed away. We will forward his remains to-morrow night, in charge of Wm. Derr, unless you otherwise direct.

Emigrants - A press dispatch from London states that a company of "Mormons," numbering 550 souls, sailed from Liverpool on the 6th inst., for Utah, and that the greater number were from Switzerland and Germany. This is somewhat erroneous. By private telegram we learn that the company left Liverpool on the 3d inst., per S. S. Wyoming, and that it numbers 664 souls. It is the fourth main company of the season. The fifth and last company this year is expected to embark from Liverpool on the 22d ult. The press dispatch referred to, says that 2,000 "Mormons" have left that port this season.
