Abraham had two women, one a wife and the other a concubines. Jacob had two wives and two concubines.

God and good morals, how comes it that the Lord blessed him and his wives? Abraham had two women, one a wife and the other a concubine. Jacob had two wives and two concubines. Both these men were the chosen of God, it avorites, the beloved of heaven, the great promises were made. Just let the Christian ministers think of it! If some of them had been living in their day, and were as ignorant as they are now, and had the power, they would have caused them to be thrown into grew great; and the Lord God of hosts and hosts thim to its fact, at that did not write that sen-tence stand." Like one boy the whole school arose to its fact, at this among the rest. I next had each boy stand up separ-ately, and I asked him on his honor if i.v. he had written the line. I shall never forget the look of honest indignation is knowledge of the writing. When this examination was over there was a moment of painful slience. "Well, boys," I said, "it just amounts to this: If things remain as at present the imputation rests on the whole school. If any of you can sug-gest a remedy, I shall be pleased to hear it." There was an indignant moment prison. "And David went on, and grew great; and the Lord God of hosts was with him. And David took him more concubines and wives out of Hore concuones and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron; and there were yet sons and daughters born to David" (2 Sam. v. 10, 13). David was the Lord's anointed, the chosen favorite; and it is said of him that he was a man after God's own the chosen favorite; and it is said of him that he was a man after God's own heart, except in the matter of Urlah the Hilttie, and that was not for taking another man's wife, and for killing Urlah with the sword of the children of Ammon. I David had several wives before he came to reign in Jerusalem, and he took more wives afterward; and this was more wives afterward; and this was 1 right and pleasing in the sight of God. It does not, however, please an infidel Christian church of the present day; not at all; they know better than God does what is right, it seems. It would hurt their feelings very much to see all the women get a chance to procure husbands. It would serve as a check to even if it did not stop, prostitution. In 1874 there were in England about eight hundred and fifty thousand more women than men, and in Germany about the same number. All these are forbidden the right to obtain husbands, by the mandates of a spurious priestleet. "I think, Mr. Jones," he said, "that you are wrong in blaming us all for what one has done. If I had written on the uoard I would have stood up and said so."

"I believe you," I answered. "Then why not believe us all," said several voices at once.

"I will be glad to do so at the mo-ment you convince me that the hand-writing came there in a similar manner to that at Belshazzar'r feast. None of by the mandates of a spurious priest-hood and governments that are founded out pagan superstition, instead of on the bible. And if England and Germany you believe that, so, as I said before, do any of you see a way out of the woods?"

Another boy rose to his feet, giggled a moment and sat down again. The whole school laughed—boy na-ture exactly—the one moment serious, the bible. And if England and Germany have so many more women than men, how many more must there be in all other countries? In the United States, it seems, men and women are about equally balanced, although not equally divided up. There are vastly more women than men in the eastern states; and in the year 1874, I think, the youg women of Massachusetts petitioned the the next one a giggle. "Come, John, what suggestion have you to offer. Don't be bashful." John rose again, looked nall comic-ally around and said, with suppressed mirth: "When I went to school down East

Although the petition was not granted, yet it was shown that the women considered themselves wronged, cut off from marsome one broke a pane, and the master couldn't find out who it was, so he began at one end of the room and whipped every scholar in the build-Perhaps the United States may feel broud of the fact that the number of indonbtedly, is the apalling extent of prostitution in this country. The money that is made gets into the poc-kets of the great mass of the people, a large proportion of whom squander "Master," he ventured, hesitatingly, "I think it is no more unfair than saying that the imputation rested on us all merely because some boy whom you cannot find out has told a lie." t on these poor unfortunate women am informed that the average life of who obtain a livelihood by his conduct convinces me that there is another in this room who is so cow-ardly and untruthful." I rose and went quickly down the room, seized Atkins by the collar and jerked him into the centre of the aisle, Perhaps another reason for women being numerically equal to men in the United States is the steady flow of im-migration; the propability, being that more men than women come to stay.
