L. M. GRANT, Chairman.
L. H. KENNARD, Secy.

Lee and Grant.

It must be admitted that when the two great captains met face to face upon the Rapidan, in May, 1864, Lee's reputation rested upon more battles fought, bloody, terrible battles, and victories won against greater odds, than could be claimed for Grant.

For three long years the whole power of the Federal government, with its unlimited resources, had not been able to reach the capital of the Confederacy, and when Grant took command of all the Northern armies, Richmond seemed to be really less in danger than Washington.

The maxim, "better is the place of the defendant," is as true in war as in law, and is especially applicable in a country like that between the Rapidan and the James. Moreover, modern earthworks, defended by modern artillery and repeating rifles, are much more difficult of successful assault than were Rodrigo, Badajoz, or Albuera, where Wellington won so much renown in his Peninsular campaign.

When Grant crossed the Rapidan he found he had a different army, under a much abler leader, to contend with than any he had met before. In the battle of the Wilderness after repeated attacks, in which the Union troops, led by the ablest corps and division commanders, displayed prodigies of heroic, stubborn valor, and covered the ground for miles with the dead of both armies, Grant was repulsed, defeated, and compelled to retreat, and leave the field in possession of the enemy; and the killed, wounded, and missing of the Union army largely outnumbered the Confederate loss. But Grant was determined; he was unused to defeat; he proposed to "fight it out on that line, if it took all summer," regardless, seemingly, of the fearful cost. For the first time in his life, however, he tried to avoid the enemy, and by a flank movement to reach Spottsylvania Court-house. But when he arrived there and was prepared to assault, Lee was ready, entrenched, and awaiting the assault, which was as heroic, as persistent, as deadly as that in the Wilderness, and as unsuccessful. At the expense of over fifty thousand men Grunt learned that in that kind of warfare Lee was invincible. The battle at Cold Harbor, fought within a month, ended the bloodiest campaign in history, and the Federal General, abandoning the attempt to take Richmond by assault, withdrew to the south of the James, and began the long campaign of siege and starvation.

He could have placed his army south of the James three months sooner than he did, and without the loss of the sixty thousand men who fought their last battle between the Rapidan and the James, and that, too, without danger to Washington.

After the siege of Richmond began the repeated and unavailing assaults of the Union army upon the Confederate lines, extending as they did for a distance of over thirty miles, and defended by less than fifty thousand men, are the best evidence of the skill of their commander, as well as the valor of the besieged. Not until the following year, and until his base of supplies was threatened by other converging Union armies, was Lee compelled to evacuate the city.

Had it not been for the approach of Sherman from the south, and the brilliant and effective campaign of Sheridan, in which he easily routed the force sent by Lee to protect his communication with Lynchburg, there is no telling how long the Confederate capital might have held out.

The defense of Richmond will always stand out in history as one of the most remarkable military achievements of any age.

It is true that Grant's men had confidence in their commander, and in his ultimate success; it is not true that they had equal confidence in his strategy. His pounding methods, so prodigal of life, inspired no personal enthusiasm or attachment. Lee, on the contrary, had the profoundest sympathy, even the heart of affection of his men. They would die for him even sooner than for the cause on which they had staked all. He embodied their ideal, both of manhood and military skill.

The Confederate camp was full of stories, true as well as false, proving his personal sympathy with them in their sufferings, and his masterly superiority as a general. This enthusiastic confidence in a measure supplied the place of numbers and achieved victories where only defeat seemed inevitable. In this highest military quality that inspires the unquestioning devotion of his soldiers, Lee was indeed one of the most remarkable generals of any age.

In comparing the military career of those two men, the historian of another generation will say that they are strikingly alike in those characteristics that lie at the foundation of military success, in quiet confidence, in that combination of moral and physical courage, that heroic persistence which no calamity can defeat, which feels the assurance of victory in the very hour of disaster. He will also say that in mental power, in the capacity for rapid combination, in strategetic invention, which is seen in the skilful disposition of his troops before and in battle, in the genius that enables a general with inferior numbers to gain the stronger position, and to have more men at the critical point and moment, and especially in the power of personally inspiring his men to endure and achieve, Lee was beyond question the greater commander.—October Bivouac.

A CURIOUS SPANISH POPULATION.

Nothing better illustrates the peculiarly mixed character of the population of Louisiana than the action which Senor Artino Baldasanoy Topete the Spanish Consul in this city, is about to take, with the assistance of the Government, for the preservation of the Spanish language and the improvement and advance of the Spanish colonists in St. Bernard parish, in that State. St. Bernard is the parish lying next to New Orleans, and is the oldest in the State. It has been settled something like two centuries, and has received little immigration of late years, yet a great majority of the population of the parish to-day, both white and black, speak Castilian.

It is the only relic left of the Spanish dominion in Louisiana, extending from 1766 to 1802, and a very peculiar relic too. The population of St. Bernard parish is unique in the United States, and almost in the world, for its people, while of Spanish origin, are descendants, not of European, but of Asiatic and African Spaniards. The bulk of the whole people of St. Bernard are a race called Islingues, in Louisiana, a creole corruption of islenos, or islanders. They are the remnant of Canary Islanders brought to Louisiana more than one hundred years ago by Gov. Galvez. Their swarthy complexion—darker than that of the average Spaniard—is due, not to mixture with Moorish blood, but to the commingling of the Spanish colonists of the Canaries with the aboriginal Guanches, representatives of a primeval African but non-negro, race that disappeared 100 years ago. The Islingues predominate in St. Bernard, and are to be found in New Orleans and elsewhere in the State, and are recognized as industrious and intelligent citizens, having filled many high offices in the State.

Coming to the colored population of St. Bernard—not the negroes, but the colored people—it is found that no inconsiderable portion of them are locally known in Louisiana as "Manilla men," either born on the Philippine Islands or descendants of colonists from those Islands. Some of them speak the original Tagalog, the dialect of the Taglas of Luzen, but Spanish is mainly spoken. The Tagal a fine specimen of Malay, with round head, high cheek bones, and thickish lips. These Manilla men have been intermingled with creoles, negroes, and others, producing a great variety of mixed races.

About two years ago a correspondent of Harper's Weekly visited one of the Malay colonies at St. Malo bayou, and described the visit with pen and pencil in such a manner as to attract attention to the most curious settlements in the United States, where fish and other feed are eaten raw, where people are outside the law and choose the eldest Malay as chief to administer punishment according to the Tagal code.

These circumstances explain the apparent anomaly that while there are but thirty-five persons of Spanish birth in St. Bernard, and nine-tenths of the population in the parish are of American birth and descent through several generations, Spanish is still the dominant tongue there, and shows as much vitality as does the French language in the creole parishes of the State.

The attention of Consul Boldasano was called to this and by him the Spanish Government was informed. Steps will be taken to improve and advance the condition of the Spanish speaking colonists of Louisiana, many of whom are scattered along the coasts and islands of Lake Borgne, far away from school and the advantages of civilization. Consul Baldasano will visit St. Bernard in a few days and confer with the various local socities there. A general gathering of the Spanish speaking population of Louisiana is proposed, and a great display on Oct. 14, the anniversary of the discovery of America, and an effort will be made to keep alive the Spanish language in Louisiana.—N. Y. Sun.

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and —between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The fish, wheat fields and grazing lands of Interior Dakota are reached via Watertown.

A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.

All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.
