CLUB CHAT.

An important club event of the week

An important club event of the week was the annual encampment of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, so called in commemoration of the pioneer march of the early settlers across the desert. The meeting should have been held on the lith of April, the anniversary of the founding of the society, but this was impossible, so that the usual monthly day of meeting, the 24th, was chosen instead. The session was chiefly a business one, the exception being a recital of the entrance of the pioneers to the valley, written by M.a. Irene Merrill Horne, a beautiful description of the arrival of President Brigham Young and his escort in sight of "the promised land," and of the transformation of the dreary desert picture which met their eyes, into a garden blossoming like the rose. The description was exact and inspiring and will doubtless be preserved as a part of the annals of the society.
