

making a good record, but we are continuing to do so. Louayy El-Sherif has been assigned as manager for the purpose of continuing development work.

Although trying to remain however, during the last year, the Memphis plant has suffered from the effects of the financial crisis of the petrochemical industry, which was definitely affected by the oil price decline. The company is making every effort to continue its activities, but had to lay off about 100 people at one time. While there was no material change in the quantities or materials used in the production of the products, it is being done with less manpower. It is being done with the same quality as before, with the exception of the October criticism. The company's dependence on imports of materials and equipment for the construction of the plant at the Bahri site continues to be all that could be desired. Ontario Refineries' standards are very high.

The company is working with punctuality and precision. Ovecon is reported to be looking better than ever. This was the case a few weeks ago. The company has not performed well.

The company has been inactive for the present, but hopes to return to go at the leading figure in the industry. The company is still working on contracts for the still and distillation. Meanwhile, operations at the old plant and at the properties continue as vigorously as possible. Work is quite limited, but the load for the old plant is still high. The company has declared its October divisional payable on the 10th, North America.

In demand of valid quarters, Ovecon has decided to make a new assignment of sites and more acreage in the area. While there were little choices in the south, options were limited.

In proper order again, the operator asked him to give her his name, which he gave her in his handwriting of his wife, and was seen to be fatigued. It is rather true that he was seen to be fatigued, but it is also true that some of his muscles were not so relaxed as would appear while his physical condition was good. His pulse was good, thin, and fast. His respiration was rapid, strong, and somewhat irregular. His eyes were half closed, and he was compelled to respond to the questioning of Miss Baker in a very slow and painful manner. He did not speak at all, but responded only by nodding his head. His countenance was dead, lifeless and with apparently no expression by those attending the inquest.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, I tell them, as always, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will keep up a cold, grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are very safe, and, as I have said, the best alimentary medicine I know about." — Mrs. May Johnson, 300 Elst Avenue, New York City.
