THE NEW EDMUNDS BILL.

Udall, of St. Johns, Arizona, who was some months since tried before the notorious and infamous Judge Summer-Howard, on a trumped up charge of perjury, and who was sentenced to Imprisonment in the Detroit House of Correction. A greater outrage upon Justice in the shape of a trial never was perpetrated. Even a number of the persons who took part in securing his conviction afterwards acknowledged the injustice of it, and did what they then could to secure for him immunity from punishment by signing a petition which was forwarded to President Cleveland, asking for his pardon. The order of clemency reached Detroit yesterday, and this morning Brother Udall telegraphed to us from Chicago to say that he was that far on his way the people's homes. Among the publame attempt to still further defend lic buildings are a school house almost completed at Plymouth, a commodious neeting house, 65x35 feet, at Portage, begun and finished, except inside work, within the last two months; and a meeting-house in course of erection at Cherry Creek. Education, which has been somewhat neglected in this valley, is being sought after with In some schools, diligence now. owing to the scattered condition of the people, not more than about ten pupils can attend, still schools are in progress there, as well as at the settements where the people are located loser together. At the Washakie school many of the Lamanites are making commendable progress in book learning as well as in agricultural and mechanical labor.

On Sun lay the 13th inst., the people of Malad and vicinity were favored with a visit from Elders S. B. Young and C. D. Fjeldsted, of the Presiding Council of Seventies. These breathren met with the Pricethood in the fore-noon. Elders Wm. Davis, of Samaria, Henry Peck, of Malad City, and J. M. Hess, of Plymouth, were set apart and added to the Presidency of the 52nd Juorum of Seventies, thereby completing that organization. These prethren were questioned closely with regard to their observance of the Word of Wisdom, keeping holy the Sabbath day, etc., and some excellent instructions were imparted on the duties of those holding the Priesthood, by the aforenamed visitors.

In the afternoon a public meeting was held, also at Malad City, the meeting house being densely filled by those anxious to hear the words of life from the mouth of God's servants. President Fjeldsted dwelt on the responsibility resting on the various of ficers of the Church, showing that each class has its separate duties and should perform them faithfully; and m turn the people should honor these of-deers in their respective positions, and yield obedience to the commands of God understandingly and firmly. Young people, as well as old, should seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit day by day, especially in aclecting companions, ontracting marriages and all such important matters. President Seymour B. Young spoke of the peculiar circumstances in which the Latter-day Saints are placed at the present time, being de-prived of the society of many unto whom it is their delight to listen. He then spoke of the institution of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, its object and benefits. He read from the Book of Mornion, some of the teach-ings of the Savior to the ancient inhabitants of this continent, and showed that the Latter-day Saints are in duty bound to respect and kindly treat their descendants now in our midst.
