

Russia's Internal Development and Not Her Far Eastern Policy Should Interest America and Europe.

New York, Oct. 2.—Fresh from a visit to the great centers of Jewish population in Russia, Michael Davitt has written his estimate of the conditions and future of those people in a volume entitled "Within the Pale," which will be issued tomorrow from the press of A. S. Barnes & Company. "The Jew, as he is ruined and oppressed by Russian officials, is a far greater danger to Russian autocracy than anti-Semitism is to the Israelites of the pale," declares Mr. Davitt in the preface to his work. "The danger," he continues, "was candidly avowed to all the representatives of the world at the recent solicited light and information."

Mr. Davitt sees further catastrophe ahead because of unnatural economic and social conditions. "The Jewish problem," he writes, "is not a problem of economic and social conditions within the pale of settlement," he writes, "are so objective that the warning cannot be ignored. It would be like

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Robbed in Boston of $69, all in his possession, arrested for vagrancy in Chicago, Manuel Josef Brum of the Madeira islands had abandoned hope. Last night he learned through telegrams that his uncle, whom he set out to find three months ago, is a millionaire in San Jose, Cal.

very details of my private business of affairs which made me unwilling to continue in office, I accepted at Mr. Low's personal request, and in spite of every other inducement and argument. Then I was offered an endorsement by the Democratic party. I did not seek it. I did not bargain, deal or dicker for it. I was not bought, sold or gagged. I made no concealment of my belief that, if taken solely by the fusionists, such

The recent assignment of Adjutant General Corbin to the command of the department of the east, with headquarters at Governors Island, New York Harbor, and the transfer of Major General Chaffee from the department of the east to Washington as assistant to Chief of Staff Young, whom he will succeed next January, have caused much comment in military circles. In some quarters it is alleged that General Corbin has lost the favor of the administration and will not succeed General Chaffee as chief of staff upon the latter's retirement in 1906. On the other hand, it is asserted that the change is made at the request of General Corbin, who found that under the new army regulations the office of adjutant general was a sort of "fifth wheel" adjunct. Then, again, it is officially announced that the change is made in order to enable General Chaffee to familiarize himself with the duties of the chief of the general staff.

having an epidemic of smallpox to cure itself by neglect. This condition of things is fully explained and expressed by the term unnatural. It is analogous to a situation which would result from the removal of the majority of the European artisan and laborer within the whole United States to reside inside of Pennsylvania and to be forbidden to seek employment outside the State. The result would be a most murderous competition for employment, the deadly rivalry for existence, the bad blood between opposing races, the poverty and social wretchedness which would be the inevitable and inevitable by-product apart from the operation of corrective laws—can readily be imagined by the American reader. But this is no overdrawn picture of the economic anarchy which is being wrought in the Russian Empire of Jewish sentiment.

"The towns are crowded with artisans and traders and as these are out of all proportion to the producers and consumers of an agricultural country, they necessarily become more destitute and wretched as their numbers increase. They are too poor to emigrate. They are prohibited from migrating. They cannot seek work on land. They are not permitted to engage in several occupations."

Mr. Davitt asserts that the czar can accomplish much for the Jews in his domain by destroying the legend of the blood atonement. "M. De Plehve and the czar," he avers, "can accomplish one good and blessed work, if so minded, without altering a single anti-Semitic Russian law. The emperor can destroy in Russia, the atrocious legend about the annual killing of Christ's children by Jews as an alleged part of the blood atonement in Hebrew Paschal rites. In this humane and Christian task he is entitled to the co-operation of the emperor of Austria, the king of Roumania, and the heads of the other Balkan states, where this story of ritual murder is constantly circulated, and not infrequently as a part of political propaganda. There ought to be a truly Christian crusade wage against this infamous product of ancient, insane, and evil traditions.

Mr. Davitt calls attention to the striking economic growth of Russia in the following sentences:

"What Russia is accused of coveting is Manchuria or devising in Persia and not what she is strenuously and rapidly achieving in the sphere of her vast domestic activities, exercises the critical attention of west Europe and American journalism. And yet the wide and sure and extraordinary progress that is being made, the economic development of a great empire, as self-contained in its measureless natural resources as the United States, and with an assured domestic market for most of her manufactured products in a population of fully 140,000,000—growing at a rate upward of 2,000,000 annually out of a natural increase—ought to be a subject of infinitely greater concern to the public thought of commercial rivals like Great Britain and the United States—as it undoubtedly is to the keener sense of German competition—than what Russian policy may or may not mean in its diplomatic bearings.

Returning to the subject of the Jew and discussing the amelioration of his condition, Mr. Davitt says:

"I have come from a journey through the Jewish pale, and a convinced believer in the remedy of Zionism, I failed to see any other that can offer an equal hope of success. It is a necessity of the actual situation and faces the growing peril of the Russian Jew with a courageous plan of repatriation. Hope for partial or ultimate emancipation in Russia there is none. Other countries cannot be expected to relieve Russia of the unhappy victims of oppression and poverty. Where, then, are they to go?"

New York, Oct. 9.—If a note which has been found on the beach at New Rochelle, N. Y., is genuine, the bottle which held it had floated thousands of miles from the Pacific ocean, where it was thrown into the sea more than a year ago by some shipwrecked sailors. The note said: "Shipwrecked on island

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.
When It Is Free of Dandruff, It Grows Luxuriantly.

Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally, luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to ture dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide.—Absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs, it allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. lands, started to find and visit his uncle, Anton Foshit, whom he only knew by name. Foshit lived in the United States. In Boston he was robbed and a fellow countryman bought him a second class ticket to Chicago and told him it would carry him to California.

Arriving in Chicago, Brum was unable to speak a word of English and tell his destination. Brum was arrested for vagrancy. When found by the police he was kneeling in prayer at the entrance of St. Peter's Roman Catholic church. Poik was called and Brum was allowed to sleep in a police station for two nights and finally the police succeeded in locating the man's relatives.

Brum was put on the right train and told to go with a man to his destination and he was given a hundred dollars his uncle had sent him.

Coal Oil Goes Up.
Pittsburg, Oct. 8.—For the third time within 10 days the Standard Oil company advanced the price of oil today, making Pennsylvania $1.65, the highest quotation in three years. The advance is due to the fact that very little new producing territory is being found.
