nation cannot be mistaken. I am amazed at the infatuation of those political leaders, who either intently acquiesce in or openly approve the dangerous interposition of the military arm in the legislative affairs of a State. The ancients said, "Whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad;" but in this case it seems to be that canine madness which the doctors call hydrophobis, for, while they are burning with thirst for pepular favor and public office, they are blindly running away from them, as mad dogs jump a stream with their parched tongues hanging out. It is amusing, too, to see these apologists for despotism affecting incredulity at the popular wrath
