

MRS SMITH SAYS HE BROKE PROMISE

Brings Suit Against Her Father-In-Law to Recover the Sum of $5,000.

HOW DIVORCE WAS HEADED OFF

Promised to Give Her a House and Lot Providing She Withdrew The Action.

The case of Mrs. W. R. Smith against her father-in-law, Henry J. Smith, is on trial before a jury in Judge Morse's court today. Plaintiff seeks to recover $5,000, the value of a home which she alleges her father-in-law promised to give her, provided she would drop the divorce proceedings against her husband and resume the marriage relations with him. Mrs. Smith, who is now only 16 years of age, testified on the stand today that after she started divorce proceedings against her husband, her father-in-law told her that if she would dismiss the same he would provide her with a suitable home either in Salt Lake or Murray and would see that she was provided for. She had the case dismissed, but she says that Mr. Smith refused to keep his promise in regard to giving her a home.

The defendant will put in the defense that there was no agreement in writing concerning the transaction, and as it involves the transfer of real estate a verbal agreement is not binding upon either of the parties to it.

Mr. Bagshaw was employed as nightwatchman at the building, and in making his rounds always used the west elevator in going from floor to floor. It is alleged that the defendant was negligent in allowing the machinery to remain faulty and out of repair.

MARCUS BROWN BURIED TODAY.

Nothing of Criminal Nature Discovered in Relation to the Boy's Death.

SOME NEW DEVELOPMENTS.

Boys Made a Fire for Light and Smoke May Have Forced Young Brown Back Into the Tunnel.

The funeral of Marcus Brown, the 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Brown, who was drowned in the tunnel on North Temple street Wednesday night, is being held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the family residence, 83 Third street. The body was in such a condition that it could not be preserved longer.

The police have made a careful investigation into the causes that led up to the boy's death, and up to this time there is nothing to indicate any criminal action on the part of the unfortunate boy's playmates.

One feature connected with the boy's entrance to the tunnel was not heard until last evening. That is that the boys made a fire in the tunnel, presumably for the purpose of giving light, and that the smoke may have prevented Marcus from getting out of the tunnel, and forced him back until he got where the water was deep and swift.

The police say, however, that there is nothing to indicate that the fire was made with the intention of forcing young Brown back into the fatal trap.

All the boys who saw Marcus in the tunnel declare that when they left for their respective homes, they supposed that young Brown had gone home, and they did not suspect that he was still in the tunnel.

Mrs. Brown, the boy's mother, has been ill for some time, and the shock caused by her son's death has almost prostrated her. In fact, her condition has been such that only her most intimate friends were permitted to see her.

BOLD DAYLIGHT ROBBERY IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, Sept. 23.—Compelling two clerks to go into a room at the point of a revolver to be made prisoners, a masked man today took a suit case containing 14,400 and records and papers belonging to the Central Grain & Stock exchange at 20 Lombard street and then made his escape.

F. J. Flynn and H. T. Henary are clerks employed by the exchange and they were carrying the suit case containing the gold, silver and papers into the office through a passage way in the rear of the building. The clerk confronted by the robber. His revolver caused them to obey his commands. The thief was hidden behind a partition so that he could not be seen until a person was within a few feet of him.

He showed perfect familiarity with the premises, and the police who are

THE FEMININE SEX THE SUPERIOR ONE.

WHO was it invented, devised and evolved every one of the peaceful industries that originally cut out man from the gorilla and oursing out? It was woman, nobody else. Primitive man spent all his days in hunting and fishing, as the tiger and shark do today, likewise the males of surviving savage races. Primitive man, unimpeded by the care of children, skipped out and left woman to root for herself and offspring or starve. Woman fastened branches of trees together to shelter her babes. That was the beginning of architecture. Woman pulled off the skin of the animal man had slain, tanned it, divided it with infinite pains into pieces which were shaped to the semblance of the human body, pierced holes in the bits of leather and sewed them together with leather or thongs for thread. Thus the tailoring, dressmaking and the leather industry began.

Woman twisted and braided tender grass fibers together into mats, coverings for the body and awnings for shelter. So the textile industry began, strictly among women, and in the hands of woman it has mostly remained till within the memory of the present generation. Woman's inborn instinct for decoration told her that the grasses would be more beautiful if stained according to regular patterns by the juices of plants. So she originated the art of dyeing.

Woman found that certain grains are good for food. She gathered these grains for herself, her children and her men. Later she learned that it was wise to plant the seed of the grains and care for them till the harvest. Men was too busy killing things to take any part in this labor. So woman evolved the art of agriculture. Next the race found out by experiment that flesh tasted better when it was subjected to the heat of fire. Men was too busy killing things to roast the game he had killed. Woman had to do that. So woman was the original cook. Woman found early that the grains would be more palatable and easily chewed if they were broken into fine bits. She ground them in a stone mortar and made the first meal. Thus woman invented the art of milling. Woman invented the vessels to hold the food—was thus the first potter.

When man had killed off the savage beasts of the jungle and had killed also all that he could of his own kind his restless soul invaded woman's sphere. He invented red devised machines to take the place of handwork. And, mark you, the very moment man took hold of woman's occupations that moment began fraud, cheating and cheapening in every one of her noble, useful industries for the feeding, clothing and sheltering of the race. Deny it who can!

Even in the field of war, man's especial province, what general of modern times took the most desperate chances and led a forlorn hope to victory, saving a nation from being blotted out and the map of Europe from being changed? A woman—Joan of Arc. Under whose reign did England first attain world prominence and power, changing from a half civilized nation to a civilized one? Under Queen Elizabeth, whose reign to this day is the most glorious and important among those of all the monarchs of Great Britain. What reign is the most splendid in the history of Russia, where the miserable Sallie law is now in force? That of Catherine the Great.

They enjoy and demand all the little earmarks of style—the slightly longer coat, higher roll collar, the broad concave shoulder, and the long and somewhat broader lapels. working on the case think they have a good clue to his identity.

It is customary for these two clerks to carry the suit case to the safe deposit department of the Union Trust company, Market and Montgomery streets every night and return in the morning. Before their arrival the place is cleared out by an Italian, and was through the eyes and nose. The revolver was of large size and formidable looking.

"March with that suit case to that step half way down the hall there," ordered the robber.

The clerks were instructed to drop the suit case and then move forward. They were forced to go into a toilet room, and getting them there the robber took a piece of cord and tied their hands to a hook which had been made in the brick wall with a large file nail, which had recently been placed there.

With the clerks and janitor tied in the room the robber took the suit case and departed. Presumably he had some conveyance near at hand. The two clerks released themselves after some trouble and notified the police of the robbery.

In our land, who wrote the book that has had the widest circulation and made the most profound impression? A woman, Harriet Beecher Stowe. Who has accumulated one of the greatest fortunes ever amassed even in America? A woman, Mrs. Betty Green; that, too, without ever having been charged with bankrupting another to get it. And, finally, a woman, Miss Pretty of Washington, can turn out more copy on the typewriter than any other person on the planet today.

It is true not many women have done these things; but, on the other hand, not many women have tried to do them—just enough to show that wherever woman takes a hand in earnest she can beat man in what he has come to consider his own field.

Man invented politics, with all the word involved. He is welcome to it. He also invented war. It has been said that woman must not vote because she cannot fight. No, heaven be praised, she mostly cannot, except as Joan of Arc fought. Woman arbitrates. The wanton, fiendish murder of billions of innocent human beings can never be laid at her door.

Pittsburg steel company's plant at Glassport, Penn., was fatally shot in a riot which broke out between about 25 strikers and the same number of men employed in the mill and deputies. William Stewart and George Carl, non-union men, employed in the plant, were badly beaten with clubs and stones before they were able to get inside the mill. There was an exchange of fire from 25 to 40 shots before the deputies succeeded in scattering the strikers.
