

MENTAL HOSPITAL INVESTIGATION.

Marine Story Aired Before Governor Wells and Board.

WITNESSES ARE EXAMINED.

No Brutality Used—Marine's Hands Were Placed in Long Sleeves to Prevent Self-Injury.

Special Correspondence.

Provo, Utah, Co., May 22.—The state board of lunacy was in session yesterday for the purpose of hearing evidence in the charges of cruel treatment of the patient Michael Marine, made by his relatives. In addition to the members of the board—Governor Wells, Auditor Tingey and Treasurer Dixon—Attorney General Breiden and Attorney A. E. Irvine, representing the family, and E. H. Marine, a brother of the former patient, who it is claimed has been mistreated, came down from Salt Lake.

The examination was conducted by Attorney General Breiden and Attorney Irvine, the board sitting as a court with Governor Wells as presiding judge. The governor stated that he had asked the attorney general to come down, not particularly as a representative of the state, because no charges had been made against the institution except through the press, but the board had taken notice of this, and the charges were made by the relatives of the patient, and the board desired to know the truth of the matter. He asked E. H. Marine to make a statement of the case, as it was reported by the relatives. This Mr. Marine did, explaining that bruises had been inflicted on the forehead, limbs and back of his brother, where the patient claimed were inflicted by attendants and which the relatives believed to have been so inflicted. Mr. Marine explained that he thought his brother had become cranky and mean and that the attendants had not had the necessary patience with him, but had mistreated him because they knew he was not sane. He gave quite an extended history of his brother's peculiarities, and told how he would become very much enraged when irritated. He said he never referred to the fact that his father had not been permitted to see the patient when he called. Attorney Irvine supplemented this statement with the further statement that the mother of Michael Marine had not been permitted to see him when she called the first time, and that when she came again, she was finally permitted to see him. He also stated that the mother had been examined by a physician who had given the opinion that they were not self-inflicted. The attorney general then asked Mr. Marine if he thought that his brother had been mistreated by the attendants, and Mr. Marine replied that he thought his brother had been mistreated by the attendants, and that he had been mistreated by the attendants, and that he had been mistreated by the attendants.

constant irritation had aggravated it. Dr. Calder further testified that the treatment of the patients in the state hospital compared very favorably with the treatment of patients in a hospital in Vermont where he had experience before coming to Utah. He testified that he was not particularly fond of the treatment of the patients in the state hospital, but that he was not particularly fond of the treatment of the patients in a hospital in Vermont where he had experience before coming to Utah. ## "GREEK JOE" COMING.

One of London's Worst Criminals Said To Be Headed for Salt Lake.

"Greek Joe," one of the worst criminals of the Whitechapel district of London, from last accounts, is heading for Salt Lake. The indications are that Joe will be gathered in as soon as he arrives because he is an undesirable citizen to be wandering at large. The man was recognized outside the city by A. R. Tobin, one of the best inspectors in the London police, who is out west on a business trip. Joe was disguised as a regular citizen in a plain black suit, and he was not in a condition to be seen by Mrs. Marine, came back in the afternoon with some friends. Rocco, Rita and wife, and the doctor learned that she thought the boy was dead, he let her see him.

John Gathrum, a nightwatch in the London testing station, on the night of April 22, he noticed that Marine was considerably disturbed and went into the ward for the purpose of changing him from the corridor, where he had been sleeping, to a safety room. He asked Marine to help him move a bed into the room and he did so; the casters fell from the bed and were broken. The doctor thought that Marine had come into the room, but he did not do so; instead of doing this he started towards the casters as if to pick them up. While Gathrum was stooping to pick up the casters Marine sprang upon him and bit him in the head. Gathrum called for assistance and two of the attendants who were on duty came to his assistance. Gathrum struck Marine with his hand for the purpose of causing him to stop biting him, but did not use any club. He did not strike Marine any harder than he deemed necessary to protect himself. While he and Marine were on the floor the latter's teeth were broken and the remaining teeth of the casters were broken. The broken glass, although he did not see any blood on the hand in the evening, Gathrum and the attendants told a blouse such as has been described on Marine and placed him in the safety room. He denied that he and Marine had quarreled and that he had been a dupe. He was corroborated by the attendants, Knudsen and Goodrich, as to the trouble with Marine, and Knudsen testified that a day or so after Marine fell in a fit, and when Knudsen heard the noise he went to the room and found him in a pool of blood; he had been scratched and was bleeding and cut his forehead. Knudsen also told of Marine scratching himself and of certain filthy habits he had, and which, he thought, were necessary for him to wear the blouse in order to restrain the use of his hands.

Dr. Calder, the assistant physician, testified as to his knowledge of the case. He was asked to give a theory of how a very bad sore on the small of Marine's back could have been produced. He said that he knew of it when Marine was brought off the hospital and could give no positive explanation of how it could be made, but thought it might be made from clanking of his back, and that Marine had had his back, and that

CHEYENNE MEN IN HAPPY MOOD

Arrangements for a Big Jollification Among Strikers.

STRIKE BREAKERS LEAVING

Generally Believed That the Long Fight on the Union Pacific Is Drawing to Close.

Special Correspondence.

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 21.—The news from New York that the officials of the Union Pacific had practically agreed to make certain concessions to the strikers, and which would end the struggle that has been in progress for over 11 months, caused much satisfaction among the local strikers and their friends. Arrangements have been made for a big jollification meeting in case the news is confirmed, as it is believed it will be. The strikers are happy, for the fight has been a long one, and one that has cost the men many thousands of dollars.

As for the strike-breakers, they are already a feeling of uncertainty among them. Many packed up their belongings last night, drew their time and left for the city. Others are waiting for a conference with the strikers, when they too expect to move to other sections. It is safe to say that if the strike is settled there will not be more than a handful of strike-breakers left in the city. The city authorities anticipate serious trouble before the strike-breakers get out of town. There have been numerous street and saloon fights and more are looked for. The police force will be doubled to better look after protection to the men that are quitting.

I is expected that in the event of settlement many of the men, some of whom have been in the strike for a long time, will return to Cheyenne and resume work. A settlement of the strike will result in an end to the employment of 1,000 men in the employ of the U. P. It is proposed, and the plans have been drawn and the work authorized, to enlarge the big machine shop, build a new 10-story roundhouse, establish a central power plant, the power to be electricity, enlarge the boiler, tin, paint and car shops, and make other improvements.

There is general satisfaction on all sides that the strike is at least nearing a settlement.

Wool at Standstill.

The big storm has had the effect of bringing most of the traveling freight agents and wool buyers back to town as there is nothing doing in the sheep yards. This state of affairs seems to be universal throughout Wyoming, Idaho, and Utah. Up to the end of last week most of the wool had been cleaned.

UP IN UTAH AND NOT UNTIL HEARING OPERATIONS ARE RESUMED WILL THERE BE ANY MORE BIG SHIPMENTS.

The wool market seems to still keep uncertain with prices ranging from 12 1/2 to 14.

SPRINKLE AND RAIL.

Acting Traffic Manager T. M. Schumacher of the Oregon Short Line left last night for Denver on a business trip. Arthur Thurt, a Rio Grande brakeman, lost two fingers while at a pump near Salda in some coal mines in the vicinity of New York.

A vigorous effort is to be made by the interstate commerce commission to compel President Baer of the Reading Coal and Iron company and the Reading railroad to build a new line of track to carry the coal from the mines to the coast.

W. H. Watts, manager of the Utah Construction company, returned yesterday from Denver. While absent he took the contract for grading a spur that is to be constructed from a point near Salda to some coal mines in the vicinity of New York.

Those railroad employees who are still out of work are now whispering around that the "13" hoodoo was responsible for the loss of the Rio Grande train. The train was made up with a mail car, two express cars, a smoking car, two coaches, two tourist sleepers, a diner and four Pullman-12 cars. Engineer Stewart, who was killed, is said to have had a horror of this number.

The railroad commissioner has authorized the Boston and Northern Railroad company to issue $1,000,000 new stock at 125 and $1,000,000 new stock at 100, revoking previous orders, which gave authority to issue $1,750,000 of Boston and Northern stock at $1.25. Both systems belong to the Massachusetts Electric companies.

William Mittendorf, agent for the Rio Grande at Oursay, Colo., is spending a few days in this city in company with his wife. They are on their way home from the coast.

The special car "Laconia" with a party of Des Moines capitalists on board is due to arrive over the Rio Grande tonight. The party is expected to start on its journey to the Rio Grande tomorrow morning.

A carload of delegates from Butte arrived in Salt Lake today. The party goes east over the Rio Grande to attend the national convention of the American Smelting & Refining company's line of steamers, returned from the north this morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

The fame of "David Harum," a book which is said to have displaced in sales any other book of American fiction produced in the last 10 years, added to the fame of Wm. H. Crane, an actor whose name is in the foremost rank of American players, combined to draw an unusually brilliant gathering at the theater last night. To all lovers of the natural, simple and the real in acting, the evening was one of unalloyed pleasure.

As a piece of dramatic work "David Harum" would probably rank low in the opinion of the critical, and with any one else than Mr. Crane as the central figure, it would undoubtedly be classed as dull, but Crane is such a rare artist, and he has surrounded himself with such an excellent company, that one entirely forgets the quaintness of the play, and the fitness of the plot. Mr. Crane makes of the famous horse trader and country banker a creature of flesh and blood, and he steps out of the pages of Mr. Westcott's book, and is in the foremost rank of the original, that it is bewildering to think when we gaze upon his delineation, that he is a mere mortal.

His performance is so delightful, and the celebrated episode of the horse trade with the deacon, so excellently portrayed, with the deacon's final scene, brought down the house; but he was equally strong in pathetic touches, and handkerchiefs were in evidence all over the house as he told the story of the death of his boy.

Another piece of acting which in its way was as unique as that of Mr. Crane, was the pathetic scene in which the mother of the famous horse trader, played by Lois Frances Clark. Rarely do we see a piece of human nature portrayed as truly as this. The mother of the famous horse trader, played by Lois Frances Clark. Rarely do we see a piece of human nature portrayed as truly as this.

"David Harum" runs for the remainder of the week with a Saturday matinee, and on Sunday. The final performance will be given tonight, tomorrow afternoon and evening. Next week will see the revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by the Ward company.

In last night's audience at the theater was Mr. Freedman, advance representative of the famous actor, who is expected to arrive in the city tomorrow morning. Mr. Freedman is the next big head liner announced at the Salt Lake theater.

CLARK'S ANTECEDENTS.

The department commander, Col. Clark, is of distinguished parentage. His grandfather, Capt. Peter Clark, was the second man to cross the British breastworks at Bennington during the revolutionary war. The commander was born in Canada, came to New York, coming west as far as Iowa before the civil war broke out. At Mount Pleasant he enlisted in company B, Twenty-fifth Iowa infantry, and served throughout the war with Gen. Sherman, from Vicksburg, including the famous march to the sea. He came to Salt Lake from California, where he was a member of the California legion. He was elected justice of the peace for the consolidated precincts of the city.

A PROFITABLE TRIP.

That is What Mr. Richards Visits to Washington Was.

Mon. P. S. Richards of this city has returned from Washington where he has been the past three weeks in the interest of important Utah irrigation matters, particularly as relates to the Utah lake. He presented the formal application for the Utah lake, and as to what is desired in the premises. He reports that he was most courteously received and believes that great good will result from the deliberations that were had. Mr. Richards declined to talk in detail for publication at this time, saying that he does not believe it would be proper to do so until he has made his report to the commission. When that is done, which will be soon, he says he will be glad to enlighten the public.
