Address, this references, National Library Association 108 State SL, Chicago, III. Very truty yours. I visited the fails of the River Iquassu, a river which rises in southern Brazil, near the Atlantic, flows almost due west, and, forming the boundary be-twien the empire and the Argentine Republic, empties into the Parana. The falls are very similar to the tails of Niagara, in form, color, and dimen-sion. They are in a dense forest that few white buye while of the Ni mere few whites have visited. Like Ningara, there are two falls separated by an island. One is a straight sheet of water, the other is horseshoe shape. Ranke Mrs Lilian V Paragoay is a beautiful country with a delightful climate, but its iong and disastrous war with Brazil has almost annihilated the male population so that you rarely see any but women and children on the streets of Assumption, the capital. The census shows that the women outnumber the men six to one. After leaving Panama I visited the ruins of Yucatan, ascended Popo-catepetl, 18,362 feet high, and took in the Zuni Indians of New Mexico. shall publish an account of my travels illustrated from photographs I have gathered in South America and some maps, charts, and plans of the coun-tries and cities."
