Behind the rostrum, to the right and left of President Smith's portrait, were displayed the national and the college colors. Festons of evergreens canopied the platform where the class was seated, and scores of crimson lights shed a heautiful radiance on the scene. In front, above the speakers stand the class banner, in gold and blue, with its inspiring inscription. "Rowing Not Drifting," was arranged in the midst of evergreen bows, and colored lights. The scene was a heautiful one as the exercises commenced. The hail was filled with friends and parents and fellow-students of the class members.

The program was in every way a creditable one. The papers were carefully prepared, and were read in a pleasing manner. Especially was the paper entitled "Class History," noteworthy. Mr. Loveland had adopted a quaint scriptural style of language in the preparation of this paper, and his humorous references to happenings of the last four years, were received with hearty applatuse and English Course—Alice Deliah Bowen, mes Rex Calvert, Florence Ethel nes Rex Calvert, Florence Ethel trest, Benjamin Alma Fowler Jennie tea Lund, Louis Hyrum Peery, Ma-Brown, Walter Driver, Clar-Forbes, Florence Mae Lanng, Castle Henry Murphy, Josephine sura Reno. Hon, W. H. Moore, president of the Good Roads association, made a brief address expressing great satisfaction in having the pleasure of attending these exercises. He paid a high compliment to Senator Smoot, and also speke most appreciatively of the work of the species and also speke most appreciatively of the work of the species. school, urging the graduates to work for the progres of the world.

Hon. Martin Dodge also spoke briefly, referring to the early history of the Church in northern Ohio, where he was reared, and expressed great astonishment and pleasure at the progress made by the pioneers and their descenficulties, and a banishment of serrowiti moods.

The "Ivy Oration" delivered by Edwin Miks was a gem, full of encouragement to those who were graduating into the great school of life.

D. P. Loveland, the class poet, read a fine poem, showing much talent, it is not too much to expect that Mr. Loveland will be heard from in the literary world. The class songs, which were interspersed among the other parts of the program, were all rendered in an excellent manner. So was the recitation, "The Echo," by Miss Elva Parkinson, and the quartet. "Goodnight," by Miss Ray Kewley, Miss Edith Bowen, L. L. Daines and Isaac Grow.

Miss Ada England, in a neat and well worded address, presented the class banner to the college, to have a place beside the emblems of classes which have gone before.

The exercises throughout were pleasing and at the close the class was warmly congratulated on its fine showling, made by the pioneers and their descendants. The question whether it was human wisdom or inspiration that guided Brigham Young in the establishment of the people here, had been touched upon by Mr. Roberts. The speaker believed it was both.

Senator Smeet in behalf of the board of frustees, complimented the students an faculty of the university for their good work, and loyalty to the institution. He gave much valuable advice to the students, encouraging them to earnest work in the future in the various vocations of life, and to loyalty to the institution from which they had graduated, and to their state and people. He brought greetings from Prest, Joseph F. Smith, who was unable to attend, on account of attending the Brigham Young memorial services in Logan.
