Of the Trouble With Alva P. Pratt and Latter's Injuries. The "News" has had considerable cor-respondence from Escalante in regard to the death of Alva P. Pratt, one corres-pondent stating that his death resulted from injuries received in a quarrel with Isaac J. Riddle. Under date of May I. Mr. Riddle writes the "News" as follows: The following are the facts regarding Mr. Alva P. Pratt's death as near as a fair-minded man can give them: I have been acquainted with him for over 20 years, and have lived in Escalante-near him for over 13 years during this time he has worked for me considerably. I found him generally faithful, he was an unassuming, quiet, steady man, but he was an extremist and rather easily persuaded, though a man of good habits usually. On April 1, 1904, I rented him my cattle and farm around and adjoining ther all right, but failed to put it on poper; this was wrong and gave room for trouble. The summer was not gone until misunderstandings began to trop out. I spoke to him about some of them; to some he gave in, others he felt were right and he had it his way until in November he moved his family to town to get his chil-dren to school, and I moved one of mine up to the mill to do the cooking for us, while I run the mill and he did other work. I brought up with me four fatten-ing bogs; much of the fine he was away after the cattle, so we fed the hogs in turn; soon killing time came and he islanded a share of the four hogs; I said, no. Some words followed and he ieft tak-ing which him all of his things saying I could take care of my own cattle, etc.; to that date he had most of his part of the cop tuken bome, and all calves were branded and divided, so there was little left to naw for insisting the contract. if

It was on Dec. 10 that we disagreed about the hogs, but before he left he agreed to return on the lish and settle up. When he came, we talked several hours, until night was near. I could see no chance to settle, so told him we could not settle without help, and I proposed arbitration; he made no answer, I said. "Its night, I will have to do the chores." So I put on my gloves, took up a half bushel, partly filed it with bran and started to the corral, leaving the mill to run; he followed me out and stood on the mill platform while I was going on toward the corral; he said. "I forbid you using any more of that hay until this matter is settled." The fact that 50 or more tons of the hay was mine, while possibly five or six of it was his, if he finished the contract, and further it was his duty to be doing the chores—when he torbid me—semed to me unreasonable. I gave him a short answer; then he started for me, saying, "I will shove this in you, you s— of a b—." I saw the glis-tening of his knife as he whipped it out of his coat pocket, I waited until he came near and went to strike. Here I will give a seutence from his own testimony. He said. "He turned around with the haif bushel in both hands and knocked me dow." The attorney: "What next?"

The ward authorities are having the grounds around the new meetinghouss cleaned up. The painters will soon finish their work upon the roof and tower of the building, so that the outside work will be nearly completea. Arrangements are being made to begin work on the inside, so that the building can be used in the no distant future

I saw his leg, got my, knife, opened it with one hand, turned it around in the hand, went to cutting at the leg." And this is the kind of testimony I was con-cleted on Train 8 p. m.

hand, went to cutting at the leg." And this is the kind of testimony I was con-victed on. Now, the fact is, I only had the half bushel in one hand when he fell, and as the mist of bran cleared away I saw him laying on his back, feet toward me, with the open knife in his right hand pointed at me. I got down on him trying to take the knife, but couldn't, so held his hand and hegan knocking on him with my gloved hand; in the struggle he was get-ing up, so I loosened from him, backed off a little, got a neck yoke and told him to get off of the place, which he soon did. I was wounded in four places, leg. hand breast and back of the head, my clothing; Li will let it go for his poor wife and children's sake." About three weeks later I was arrested for assault. I took a change of yenue to Henricylle, where the charge was chang-ed to assault and battery, and I was con-victed. Knowing I was innocent of anything only what was done in self-defense, I appealed to the district court, after almost a year, the trial came off and I was con-victed of battery; the verdict of the jury of its self shows that I was not the one that made the assault, and I feel yet that made the assault, and I feel yet that made the assault, and I feel yet that what J did was justified after ho assaulted me. that what I did was justified after ho assaulted me. Your correspondent said his death was caused by a man for whom he worked during 1994, let us see. Friend Pratt was a man who had followed mining and working in mineral mills at times ever since J first knew him, and during 1992 and 1996, he worked continuously in the mines and mills about Kimberly and Serier. When he came home early in De-cember of 1993, he was badly used up, had two ribs broken and other severe biruses about the head and face, he had been under the doctor's care for two weeks before he started and could not drive bis own team home. Mr. Dunsife drove it part way and my son the bal-ance; he claimed he had fallen down a stope in a mine; but in fact he had trou-ble with the man at the boarding house and go badly beaten up. more hopeful of success. Quarterly conference of the Fremont stake convened in Rexburg April 28 and Elders John Henry Smith and George Albert Smith of the quorum of Apostles were present.

Last Sunday evening at the conclu-sion of stake conference, the Mutual Improvement associations of the stake held their quarterly meeting. The program rendered was an exceptionally good one and it was called the Evan Stephens program. The songs that were sung were the compositions of Prof. Stephens; talks were made upon his literary and musical ability by Professors James A. Langton and Os car A. Kirkham and this together with the good things said by the visiting brethren, made the meeting one of the nest interesting and instructive meet-ings ever held here. Bishop Thomas E.
