BREVITIES.

High houses are mostly empty in the upper story.

Mint julups are naturalized in Paris as grog American aux fines herbes.

Henry Ward Beecher has said that it would never do to preach cream and practice skim-milk.

The Express says Senator Chandler will go to Greece, where he will doubtless become a tallow chandler.

Bachelor—The slave of liberty; an oak from ivy; a wild goose in the air, much abused by tame game in the farm yard.

Peach trees should be laid bare to the roots at this season, and the crops of the next year will be materially increased.

If you desire to be certain that your eggs are good and fresh, put them in the water. If the butt turns up they are not fresh.

By the wise policy of Iowa a large part of that State which was covered with hazel shrubs and prairie grass fifteen years ago, is now clothed with forest. Planting forest trees exempts a certain amount of valuation for ten years.

The magnolia tree, the pride of Southern forests, has at last been put into practical use. An Illinois basket maker has established himself at New Orleans, and is making beautiful baskets from the wood of this tree.

The Boston Journal of Chemistry says: "No variety of wine is more dangerous than what is called claret. It is usually a vile mixture. Thousands of gallons are made by allowing water to soak through shavings, and adding thereto a certain proportion of logwood and tartaric acid, and a little alcohol."

A moralist took his daughter to see the Siamese Twins. "Observe, Prudence, my dear," he remarked to her, "Observe the care exercised by Providence, which unites those two citizens; and think what a heavy and wearisome fetter might that membrane which attaches them together have been, if, instead of being brothers, they had been strangers to each other."

A correspondent of the New England Farmer gives this method, which looks practicable, for getting rid of the rose-bug: I find it an easy matter to keep four or five hundred vines entirely clear of these pests. I have also about twenty common blush roses. I go out early in the morning with a pail, and pick roses and bugs together, as nearly all the bugs will sleep in the roses. Ten minutes is time enough to go through the whole of them.

Wendell Phillips has worked himself into an unwholesome rage against the Pacific railroad, on the ground that that machine will not be able to kill as many people as Phillips would like to have butchered. In a late article in the Anti-Slavery Standard, he declares that he sees great good in the fact that "the Indians have begun to tear up the rails and shoot passengers and conductors on the Pacific railroad." After expatiating on the wrongs the Indians are supposed to have endured, he adds: "Last year, Indians destroyed locomotives and shot conductors. Timid Durant forbade the telegraph wires to report the fact. He trembled for his road. To-day, 15,000 warriors on the war-path;—a thousand miles of exposed road; this railway, the pet plaything of the American people! Would our words could reach every Indian chief. We would tell him, lay down your gun, but allow no rails to lie between Omaha and the mountains. "The accursed code' is O'Connell's best weapon, said Sheil The Pacific railway is the Indian's Alabama. Every blow struck on those rails is heard round the globe. Haunt that road with such dangers that none will dare use it."

A good many years since a steamboat was accustomed to make daily trips between Buffalo and Niagara Falls. The nearest point to which she could approach the mighty cataract was Chippewa Creek, a few miles distant on the Canada side. One day there was a pleasant excursion, and several hundred men, women and children went down from Buffalo. After spending the day in all sorts of amusements, in looking upon the falls, admiring the rainbow, passing under Table Rock and behind the falling waters, they gathered themselves on board the boat, toward night, to return home. By some miscalculation of the engineer, sufficient steam had not been generated, and when, after passing out of the creek, the boat met the strong, rapid current of the river, instead of moving forward she was slowly, slowly borne backward toward the dreadful cataract. The people on board, as may be imagined, became instantly alarmed. The color fled from their cheeks; they stood in speechless horror; the roar of the cataract sounded fearfully distinct in their ears, as slowly, slowly, they were still borne back towards it. At length the engineer bethought him of the oil with which he lubricated his machinery. He threw it into the furnace—the flames blazed up more intensely—steam was generated more rapidly—the wheels moved with increased velocity; there was a pause, as the Titan forces were contending for the mastery. A moment more, and there was an upward movement. Now slowly, slowly the boat passed against the current. In a short time the point of danger was passed, and a long, heavy sigh of relief broke from the bosom of every one on board. A venerable, grey haired man was there among them. He lifted his hat from his head, and said in a voice trembling with emotion, "The Lord has delivered us; great is the name of the Lord; let us pray." And down upon the deck kneeled the multitude, while the heartfelt offering of thanksgiving went up to God, who had wrought for them so great a salvation.
