WITHIN SIX YEARS, and it was agreed to, as was also the amendment by Berry providing that no part of the money collected from individuals shall be returned by the individuals shall be returned by the United States, as a set-off against any state indebtedness. Vance offered an amendment extending the provisions of the bill to the cotton tax collected under the law of 1862 and subsequent law. He said if the direct tax was to be refunded, this cotton tax (which was also a direct tax) ought to be refunded. George and Berry advocated this. Brown and Morgan, while believing the cotton tax ought to be releving the cotton tax ought to be re funded, thought the proposed amend-ment would defeat the pending bill. Sherman vigorously opposed the amendment.

Beck thought the pending bill should Not be encumbered with anything else. Voorhees' views were the same, and Voorhees' views were the same, and after further debate the amendment was rejected, 46 to 16. Further amendments offered by Chandler and Plumb were rejected, and the bill passed, 48 to 10. The negative votes were these of Berry, Blair, Jones (Arkansas), Paddock, Platt, Plumb, Saulsbury, Teller, Vest and Wilson (Maryland).

The Blair education bill was then taken up, and Brown addressed the Senate in support of it. At the conclusion of Brown's remarks, Blair continued his speach in support of the bill.

In the home of a Jewish citizen of New York was recently seen a tiny fiame burning in a handsome goblet. Examination showed the goblet to be half filled with water, on the sop of which floated about an inch of sweet oil. A tiny float of corks fastened on either side of a metallic ring rested upon the oil. On the ring was placed a wax taper hardly thicker than a thread passed through a small circle of wood, so that the lower end of the taper dipped through the ring into the sweet oil. The upper end was lighted. The sweet oil drawn up through the wax-covered wick served to keep it slight for several hours. "We burn this," said the gentleman, "in memory of one of our dead. When the taper burns nearly out we substitute another, ax on tobacco and to the regulations, governing the same. The association adjourned and in the afternoon paid their respects to the President.

In the course of an interview this afternoon a prominent member of the association said, while some members are in favor of the
