CLUB CHAT.

Perhaps the banner convention of the State Federation of Women's clubs was that held at Ogden this week. An excellent program, a large attendance, features social and pleasurable, such as the Hermitage session and the general hospital of Ogden's club women went to make the meeting truly memorable and aside from this the report of the federation's achievements in civic, benevolent and other lines add to its importance. Great credit belongs to the retiring president, Mrs. Antoinette Kieney, whose personal effort has helped to make this week of the federation's history. It has had no more efficient executive and its appreciation of the fact was expressed in many complimentary terms. Mrs. Kieney's successor, Mrs. Byron Cummings, assumes the duties of the position with a most creditable record in club work as a promise of her capability for the position and the big institution will without doubt win other laurels under her guidance. The entire body of officers elected on Thursday is satisfactory in every way, and the convention as a whole covered itself with glory.

STOLE AND MUFF OF GRAY OSTRICH.

The tall-made girl, with her short pleated skirt, semi-fitting jacket and flower bedecked cloche chapeau has added another charming accessory to her fluffy ruffles costume. This is the feather neck-scarf and most of ostrich, coq or marabout. These fashionable accessories come in a variety of shapes, especially the neckpiece, but the smartest is the long flat stole which lays flat over the shoulders and drops to the knees. The marabout stole is formed of strands of ropes of the feathers, four, five or six, in number, each strand caught to the other with a strong thread here and there, but the ostrich is solid, is mounted on a foundation. The muff, like that pictured, is of the pillow variety—quite large, light of weight and warm.

In Woman's World.

The sixteenth century country houses had no formal visitors' books, but they had a custom which answered the same purpose, so we are told by Mr. Escott in his "Society in the Country House" (recently issued by George W. Jacobs & Co.). Famous guests were in the habit of leaving behind them some tribute to their host's qualities. This might take the form of an epigram, a stanza, or a prose sentiment. Sir Philip Sydney, on leaving "Knole," attached to a copy of his host's "Mirror for Magistrates" a prose compliment to its noble nobility. Spencer, a more frequent visitor, dropped a mystical panegyric on the private virtues of "its truly noble author." "Who," he asks, "more loving to his wife, more tender to his little ones, more fast to his fetters? A pretty custom this, which might well be copied in this more prosaic twentieth century.

Madness with gorgeous silk petticoats are as much in favor as ever and are shown in an enthralling lot of pretty styles. A lovely one of Alencon lace, not unlike the sole and sole green tulle, has a wide girde of crushed satin running under the arms and over the bust in empire fashion. The front and back end is double pointed as do also the sleeves. With this creation a robe green silk petticoat trimmed with gold-trimmed ribbon and lace falls set up in festoon makes a sumptuous bodice costume. Another stunning jacket of white silk voile and real Valenciennes lace and insertions is in case effect with drooping shoulders that form the sleeves and run into the rounded front. Pink ribbons alternate with lace ribbons in the decoration.

WATER, THE KING OF BEVERAGES.

Water is the king of beverages; it is the beverage to which all turn when they would cure themselves of either beverage. But water that is not pure may be more harmful than the most harmful of other drinks. Every health department should emphasize the danger of impure water and urge upon the public the necessity of giving this matter first consideration. There are at this time many numerous health reports bearing on this subject, and it is not difficult to prove that the death rate would be enormously lowered by greater care with regard to the consumption of pure water. Pure water is the basis of all other beverages. All beverages of man's manufacture are water that has been adulterated by admixtures and chemical treatment. Pure water is the one beverage which has stood the test of science and come down to us unadulterated through continuous use for centuries. It is nature's choicest blessing and, with other beverages, undergoes many changes with time. Each age brings forth in new styles, new methods of manufacture, new processes of chemical treatment, aging and keeping. Foods change with each successive generation. We eat different kinds of food from time to time, each generation prepares them differently, there are different methods of compounding them, different methods of cooking them. Pure water is the same yesterday, today and forever. From long before the time of the Pool of Silom, mentioned in holy writ, to the present time, pure water has undergone no change, and people have never lost a taste for

it. Other tastes come and go, the taste for water never varies. So long as man and beast inhabit the earth the "praiseworthy" of drinking water will never cease—What to Eat. Garments to Order a Specialty Open Evenings

For Eggplant a la Creole—Prepare as directed in the preceding recipe until you are ready to stuff it. Then make the forcemeat of the pulp, a chopped sweet pepper, one onion, salt, and minced, four or five ripe tomatoes, cut up small, and a cupful of fine crumbs. Add a great spoonful of melted butter, pepper and salt to taste, not omitting a little sugar to correct the acid of the tomato. It is well to parboil the pulp of it by large before adding it to the stuffing.

Fill the hollowed halves with the mixture, bind as in the last recipe, and lay in the pan.

For Scalloped Eggplant—Peel, cut in strips as long as you desire and nearly as wide. Lay these in ice-cold water well salted, and leave in a cold place for an hour. Then boil until they are clear and tender, and not broken. Drain all the water off in a colander, and arrange the strips in a buttered baking dish. Butter, pepper and salt, smear with fine crumbs, and press in the butter then another layer of eggplant, and so on until the dish is full. The last layer should be thicker than the rest and soaked with cream. Bake, covered, half an hour, then finish.

For Scalloped Mushrooms—Select mushrooms of medium and uniform size. Skin them without cutting off the stems. Lay enough to cover the bottom of the dish, stems up. Sprinkle in a pudding dish. Dust with salt and pepper, and put into the grill a little melted butter. Then smear very lightly with the cream, and arrange a second layer upon the first. Season and butter, cover with crumbs, and bake in cream dot with butter and salt, covered, for 20 minutes, and serve very delicately. Serve at once. There is no more delicate preparation of mushrooms than this.
