

A PERFECT CURE.

A contributor tells an exchange how he was permanently cured of fits. He was riding in the mining district of Nevada—one of those mushroom growths common in the territories—when night came upon him. Dazed and hungry, he drew up at a greasy, dirty shanty which was called a tavern, and sought accommodation. He thus details his night's experience.

The landlord could only give me a room with a bed-fellow. "Very well, I don't object," said I, as he led the way by the light of a miserable tallow dip, which he left with me to light my way.

I surveyed the room, and particularly my bed fellow. He was a mild looking man. I thought—perhaps a class-leader in some primitive log church near by. His repose was so quiet and childlike that I thought we would sleep peacefully together for the night; but before I had blown out the light he opened a snore that seemed like a roar between filling a saw and sawing a board, and my feelings at once became malicious toward him.

I blew out the light and turned in, and still the snore continued. The snore had now risen, making every object in the room visible.

I punched my friend, and as he opened his eyes with a snap he said: "By jingo! how you scared me, Mister! You going to sleep here to-night?"

"Yes." "Well, I'm mighty glad of it. I always like company." It's kinder lonesome to sleep alone.

"Yes, it is so. Pardon me for waking you, but I thought it my duty to tell you that I sometimes take fits."

"What, fits? You don't say so, Mister?"

"Yes, I do. I'm not particularly dangerous, but I bite sometimes; so be careful that I don't get my teeth into you."

"Well, I'll be dogged! I hope you won't have any fits."

"So do I." "I hope, Mister, you won't bite me, if you do have any fits."

"O, I hope not." He drew a long breath and then said: "Well, I'm afraid I won't sleep any to-night."

"O, don't lose any sleep."

"But how am I to know when you are going to have fits?"

"O, I groan and breathe hard, and foam at the mouth; and, when you hear me snap my teeth like a dog, then you'd better look out."

"Well, I'm blamed if I ain't sorry, Mister, you come in here. I'm afraid you'll be more company than I want."

"O, don't be uneasy. I sometimes do not have any for months. Let's go to sleep;" and I pretended to drop off into peaceful slumber.

My companion lolled and tumbled uneasily for some time, then dropped off into a restless sleep, and soon commenced that old snore just where he left off when I woke him up. That decided me upon having a fit, and with a fearful snore, and a horrible growling, I set my nails into his arm, and my teeth into his shoulder; just hard enough to nip nicely, but it was enough for the purpose. With a terrible yell he sprang from the bed, and went flying down stairs, exclaiming:

"O dear, he's got fits, he's got fits! He's bit a piece out of my shoulder!"

The landlord, with a crowd from the bed-room, came hurrying up, and found me just recovering from the effects of the fit, and giving me a hot toddy from his own private bottle, he left me. He carried with him the clothing of my bed-fellow, who had turned in on a blanket down stairs, resolved to be bitten no more by men having fits.

It was delicious to have the whole bed to myself, and I luxuriated in it by stretching myself easily across it.

I had soon dropped into a peaceful slumber as innocent as my childhood, when I was aroused by some one roughly shaking my shoulder, and saying: "Wake up, stranger, and move over. Half this bed's mine."

I opened my eyes on a six foot teamster, who was pulling off his rough boots. A rough looking specimen he was; but he annoyed me most by taking up two-thirds of the bed and crowding me to the wall. I concluded to try another fit, and said:

"My friend?"

"O! shut up your trap, I'm sleepy."

"But I thought I'd tell you that I have fits."

"Well, fit away, so you don't wake me."

"But I bite when I have them."

"Well, bite the bed-post, then."

Now, this ought to have convinced me that he was the wrong customer, but it didn't, and, waiting until he was sound asleep, like a fool I buckled in and set my teeth and nails into him in splendid style, while I groaned fearfully. It was the best fit I had ever had, a perfect success on my part, but the way that chap jumped out of bed and maddened me around that room was the most perfect success in pugilistic treatment I ever experienced. He brought me out of that fit. He cured me of it. I don't think I'll ever have another, but I didn't like his medicine. My eyes all blacked up, my nose bled, my shirt-front all torn off and to make the matter worse the fellow was asleep in five minutes after, as though nothing had happened.

The next morning I went down late to breakfast, and all crowded around to see the man who had fit, and to tell me that my horse had been stolen. The mild-looking man, my first bed-fellow, had gone off with him.
