Two Trains in Spain Collide with Fatal Results.

Madrid, Sept. 24.—The express train running between Burgos and Santander, colliding with a passenger train, fifteen people were killed and twenty-four injured.

It is thought that ten of the injured will die. The collision was due to a blunder of the telegraph operator by signifying that the train was moving when it was not. The engineer attempted to control the engine.

This will stop up the most important lines of travel to the west, the south, and the north.
