

Friday, September 12, 1884.

THE MAILS.

MAILS.	ARRIVE.	CLOSE.
Eastern.	8:30 am.	9:30 am.
California and west.	10:30 am.	11:30 am.
Montana and north.	11:30 am.	12:30 pm.
O. & N. E. East.	1:30 pm.	2:30 pm.
Ogden, Utah.	1:30 pm.	2:30 pm.
Idaho.	2:30 pm.	3:30 pm.
Park City, Utah.	3:30 pm.	4:30 pm.
Toronto, Utah.	4:30 pm.	5:30 pm.
Idaho.	5:30 pm.	6:30 pm.
Bingham, Utah.	6:30 pm.	7:30 pm.
Salt Lake City.	7:30 pm.	8:30 pm.

The above is standard mountain time.

FRAGMENTS.

SPAN OF MULES FOR SALE. See advt.

Not a single case in the police court to-day.

The bathing trains scarcely stop at Black Rock unless required to do so. All business is transferred to Garfield.

The Red Stockings of this city and the Athletics of Ogden are playing a match game of base ball on Washington Square.

A Miss BILLING, employed in Smoot & Co.'s drug store, Provo, was severely injured by an explosion yesterday afternoon, while mixing some chemicals in a mortar.

Miss ANNE WALKER, daughter of J. R. Walker, Esq., of this city, will be married on Monday next to Mr. M. J. Cheeseman. The event will take place at Monterey, Cal.

A GRAND transcontinental excursion is to start shortly from Philadelphia. The objective point is Colorado, but many will probably come to Utah before returning.

The Blue Stockings and the Continentals played base ball yesterday till they and the spectators were thoroughly tired. The score was 20 to 7 in favor of the former.

The Contributor office is vacating the brick building just north of Z. C. M. I., and after the 15th may be found in more convenient and nicer quarters in the Old Constitution building, opposite the Z. C. M. I.

LOCAL NEWS.

Caledonia Society.—The regular business and quarterly meeting of the Caledonia Society will be held at the Shoe Factory, to-morrow, Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is desired, for the election of new members and other necessary business.

Z. B. B. S.—Members of Zion's Benevolent Building Society should remember to pay their subscriptions on or before Monday, the 15th inst. The regular monthly meeting of the Society will be held at the Shoe Factory on Monday evening. Those members who were delinquent last month with their payments should be coming up with their dues.

Theatre.—The hold which the most sensational drama "In the Ranks" has taken upon the public mind, is well attested by the large audiences which are drawn out to witness it each evening. Last night's was no exception, though there was naturally some falling off in the attendance, compared with the opening night. The last representation of this popular piece will be this evening, and of course everybody and Kentucky will "get their".

A False Report.—Messrs. Jennings and Sons deny the truth of the report that they are about to retire from business in general merchandising, or that Mr. Frank Jennings, who went East to purchase goods, has been telegraphed not to do so. They are preparing for a bigger trade than ever, they say, and have no intention whatever of "going out of the business" as the report says. People should think twice before starting rumors that have no foundation.

A New Local.—Mr. Horace G. Whitney assumes to-day his new duties as city editor of the Salt Lake Herald, for which paper he has already written extensively in the capacity of Dramatic and Lyric editor, both in its Sunday morning columns and in its daily issue. The gentleman wields a ready and facile pen, and has a style well adapted to the character of the journal on whose pages he is to be permanent. We congratulate him and the Herald on his advent into the regular field of journalism, being satisfied that nature intended him for just such a vocation, and heartily wish him every success in catering in this direction for the public mind.

The Bullion and Crows' Foot.—John Beck, Esq., of Lehi, was on the streets yesterday afternoon, rustling towards the train which was to take him south again. He took time enough, however, to tell a News reporter that the Bullion Mine, in Tintic, of which he is the lessee and part owner, is shipping two carloads (30 tons) of lead and silver ore to the Germania Smelter, daily, and that about fifty men are employed there. He is also a half owner in the Crown Point Mine, a continuation of the Bullion lode, as yet but slightly developed, but which promises well. This said, Mr. Beck left in haste for the depot, having spent 24 hours in town on business.

The "Juvenile".—The September 15th number of the Juvenile, the resident of the pressroom and the bookbinder, and the concluding number of the third quarter of the volume, comes fresh from the publishers' hands. It is as good as its predecessors and can be read with profit by every one. Its illustrations and music are two excellent features, and these, the prospectus for the next volume, which is inserted in the present number, assures us will be continued. The four page supplement contains some good selected pieces, words with agents and patrons, lists of publishers for sale, etc., etc. The number is, in all, one of the best ever issued.

Pickpockets' Opportunity.—A circumstance occurred at last evening's fire which ought to serve as a warning to pick pockets on their guard when in a crowd. A young lady accompanied by a couple of children, being curious to know the whereabouts of the blate and the extent of the damage done, made her way into the strong of people who stood in front of the smoking building. She was in dress excitement at the black clouds of smoke issuing from the windows. On returning home she discovered that an attempt had been made to rob her of her watch, the gaud to which had been cut plainly in two and the pocket stolen. She has to thank the appalling custom of carrying ladies' watches in a new place instead of at the waist in a pocket, for the continuing ownership of her timepiece.

THE MOLECULAR TELEPHONE.

THE RIVAL TALKING-MACHINE BY INTRODUCED, AND A LOCAL COMPANY ORGANIZED.

"Hello George? What's new?" exclaimed a News reporter yesterday afternoon, as he paused in his breakfast pace long enough to grasp the extended hand of that prince of item-hunters' patrons, George A. Meers, the latter at the time emerging from, or standing on the steps of, "The Jones" banking establishment. "Well," replied the latter, with his usual ask-me-what-you-please sort of a smile, "the newest thing, I guess, is the new telephone we are experimenting with and are thinking of introducing here. Come in and see it."

North with, the two entered the building, where the reporter was introduced to Mr. G. F. Prescott, another of the experimentalists, after having previously carried on a conversation with him through the medium of two of the Molecular Telephone, temporarily branched in the rear apartments of the bank, where Col. Hollister, also one of the parties testing the machine, has his office.

Mr. Prescott informed our scribe that it was the intention to organize a local company to take in hand the matter of introducing the new telephone, to derive their right from a party in Ogden (Mr. Brown, we believe), who has the agency for Utah, Idaho and Montana, the present prospect being simply a preliminary to that end.

"What are the advantages claimed for this telephone over those now in vogue?" asked the reporter.

"One thing," replied Mr. Prescott, "is the freedom from buzzing sounds, so audible in those instruments having metallic diaphragms. These you will observe, are made of cork. The main point of superiority claimed for this is a more perfect operation at long distances. For instance, it has been used successfully between New York and Chicago."

"You will also see," added Mr. Meers, "how simple its construction is," and, putting the action to the word, he began taking the diaphragm and ear piece apart, showing the latter to be made internally of wood, and the former, as already said, of cork.

"The reason it is called the Molecular Telephone is because the sound is carried through the vibration of the molecules of the cork. Of course the metal diaphragm works on the same principle, only its molecules are smaller and produce a different kind of resonance. And then this has two coils to its battery, the extra one doubtless being employed for additional power. The shape is also different to the Bell Telephone, but then that is an immaterial matter. You will see that in this the diaphragm is at the top of the instrument and rests on an incline, thus being very handy to the mouth, while the bells are below, just over the battery."

"Is this the first one of its kind in the city?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Prescott, "but an exchange of 300 subscribers has just been perfected in Ogden."

"What is this we hear about an infringement of patents, claimed by the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Company?"

"Oh, that will amount to nothing. The New York company will fight that matter in the courts if it comes to anything," replied Mr. Prescott, "but there is no ground for the charge. It has been mentioned in the East, but that's about all. It has not yet caused any litigation. We shall go right ahead. This machine will be placed in Wells Fargo's bank, connecting with Col. Hollister's office. An entirely distinct system will be established to that already here. These instruments will be furnished cheaper than now, and we will form a local company of our own business men, with a thousand shares, say at $25 a share, thus keeping money at home, in a measure, instead of its going into the hands of non-residents of the Territory."

The reporter here bowed his acknowledgments for the information imparted, and resumed his gliding gait up Main Street.

A MOUNTAIN OUT OF A MOLEHILL.

THE PETTY PERSECUTION OF AN OFFICER OF THE LAW.

Constable Charles H. Crow was arrested last evening on a warrant issued by United States Commissioner E. L. Sutherland, at the instance of Edward G. Hooper, of grand larceny. The basis of the complaint, indeed it has any, is as follows:

The constable, about three weeks ago, seized the property of Hansen and Co., proprietors of the candy store just north of the Walker House, on an execution issued, from the 24th Precinct, against said Hansen and Co., and in favor of John Wetzel, the owner of the premises they occupy, for the non-payment of rent. The goods were taken in a square out and under manner, and not "calendishly," as is justly asserted by certain parties whose purpose is to distort the truth.

After the goods were seized, Edward G. Hooper laid claim to the same, and, in this, alleging that he bought his interest in the business. But it seems he never was acknowledged by Houghton, another of the company, as an owner in the business, nor did he himself, in the Commissioner's Court this morning, claim to be the owner, although, at the same time, he was asserting that he had bought into the concern.

Besides, the goods were of such a character that they could not be divided, except by splitting them with an axe, or some such way, and Mr. Crow, on the advice of Mr. Wetzel's lawyers, took possession of the whole property, and sold Houghton's half-interest therein on the 3d of September, leaving Hooper's interest untouched, for him to regain possession of at any time he felt inclined to do so, by applying to Mr. Wetzel.

This was the matter all squares and upright, and said to be so by lawyers of reputation who were cognizant of the facts. But the trouble was just here, the constable was "Mormon," as was the Justice who gave the judgment in the former case, and a drunken pettifogger of a lawyer—a foundling witness—"Mormon"—was pronounced to take the matter in hand for a consideration.

The persecutors first applied to Judge Pyper for a warrant on which to arrest him, but he refused to issue one on so flimsy a pretext. Commissioner Wm. McKay was next solicited, but he declined for the same reason. Finally Commissioner Sutherland was persuaded to fill out the warrant, and, as a result, Mr. Crow, and, as a result, Mr. Wetzel were both arrested, the latter yesterday morning, and the former last evening, just after returning from Bingham.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

The matter came up before Commissioner Sutherland this morning at 10 o'clock, but was adjourned till 3 p.m., when it was again taken up, and, to allow the defendants time to be picked counsel, it was put over till the 10th inst.

TERRITORIAL ITEMS.

SUMMARIZED FROM LATEST EXCHANGES.

The Idaho Democratic territorial convention meets to-day at Boise City.

Ogden had the Jubilee Singers last night, and will have Eddie Sklar next Monday.

Conrad Wals, of Logan, was thrown from his wagon the other afternoon and severely bruised. The team away, two wheels passing over the driver's body.

Two boys of M. D. Hammond, of Providence, were thrown from a running horse last Sunday, one of them having his left thigh broken in two places.

A man named McIntire was imprisoned a few days since in Paris, Idaho, for biting off an antagonist's ear and a piece out of his breast. The fight occurred near Dingle, a station on the Oregon Short Line.

A Helena, Montana, man says he is certain a submarine river runs under that city, and can put his foot upon it. He says the corporate limits where water can be reached. He says it may be a cave, still it runs quite swift. He has been satisfied of this fact for eight years.

Last Night's Fire.—The fire which set the bells ringing and alarmed the town last evening, was at the millinery establishment of Button and Boyan, Main Street. It started some minutes before 9 o'clock, in the cellar of the store, it is supposed, though from what cause could not be definitely ascertained, unless, as some think, it was from the smoldering embers in a stove on the second floor, sparks of which may have fallen through the flue into the basement, where a fire was found burning. Another theory is in circulation, but there was no clue to trace it by.

The firemen arrived on the scene soon after the alarm was given, and, supposing the fire was in the second story, from the windows of which dense volumes of smoke were issuing, they directed their efforts in that quarter, and it is said a large quantity of goods was damaged by the water. But this, under the circumstances, was unavoidable, and the efforts of the brigade put an end to what would have undoubtedly developed, if unchecked, into a disastrous conflagration.

Button and Boyan's is between Auerbach's store and McCornick's bank, both of which were in imminent peril until the flames were extinguished. The loss is put up into the thousands, from fire and water combined, but all is covered by insurance.

BATHING in the lake finds few admirers just now. The water is rather too cold.

There is a letter at this office for Jas. P. Macdon, Esq., of Boston, a California postmark. Will Mr. M. please call for it.

A TERRIBLE TALE.

CAPTAIN MCCLINTOCK SAID TO HAVE BEEN SHOT AND EATEN BY HIS COMPANIONS IN THE ARCTIC.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 1.—A morning paper here contains the following dispatch from New Orleans: "An old and respected citizen, in which it is stated and is believed for the first time publicly, that Captain McClintock, of the Sir John Franklin Arctic expedition, was shot and his body eaten by his starving companions. Mr. Caldwell's story is that soon after the return of Captain Hall from his expedition for the rescue of Sir John Franklin and his men, Lady Franklin came to Cincinnati to learn from Capt. Hall, who had returned from the expedition, the fate of the expedition. He related to her that he had learned from a Eskimo who was with the Franklin party, that Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot and eaten by his companions. The story was so related that it was believed to be true. After a second consultation with the ladies, Captain Hall took dinner with Mr. Caldwell and his family. In speaking of Miss Crockett's earnest inquiries for news of her lost lover, Captain Hall said: 'I could not tell her the truth, as it would have broken her heart. A little later, when speaking of Mr. Caldwell, he rehearsed what he had learned from an Eskimo who was with the Franklin party. Suppressing his voice almost to a whisper he said: 'Captain McClintock was shot and eaten by his companions. He had reached the point of starvation, where it became a question whether all could be saved or whether the others might live. The agreement was made that all should die. The fatal shot fell to Captain McClintock. He yielded with composure to his fate. He was shot