OGDEN SOCIAL NEWS.

Ogden, Jan. 5.—The leading social event of the week was the grand ball and banquet given by the Weber club in Christensen's magnificent hall on the evening of December 31st, when the members of the club with their wives, sweethearts and many friends, gathered together to bid farewell to the prosperous year of 1900 and to welcome the incoming of the New Year and Century. The event is one which brought joy to the hearts of all those who participated, and will long be remembered as one of the most delightful evenings of the year 1900, and an appropriate ushering in of the Twentieth century. This was the second annual ball given by the popular club, and to be appreciated must needs have been witnessed. The reception room was exquisitely decorated with palms, potted plants and evergreens, and the electric chandeliers were neatly draped in prettily tinted crepe paper; in the corners were nicely arranged cozy corners, all in silk drapings. The hall room was very artistically decorated with evergreens, flowers, etc., and the large columns were entwined with blending crepe paper and smilax, and on the walls hung elegant pictures. The orchestra started was backed in evergreens, and on either side of the stand was a champagne punch booth, with colored attendants, who served the dancers with refreshments.

Christensen's augmented orchestra furnished the sweet strains of music, through the lovers of dancing tripped the light fantastic from 9 until 11:30 o'clock, when the merry crowd adjourned to the banquet hall down stairs, marching down two by two. The banquet room was elegantly decorated with clustered evergreens and flowers. Two tables, the full length of the hall, were laden with the choicest edibles, and were very prettily decorated with cut flowers and ferns. At each plate elegantly gold lettered menu cards, and carnations, were found, and as the guests partook of the following sumptuous feast, the orchestra discoursed battle music:

Prime Raw Oysters.
A La Lynehaven Bay.
Chicken Straws.
A La Gumbo.
Queen Olives.
Ghorkins.
Sauternes.
Roast Young Turkey.
Au Cranberry Sandwiches.
Cream Bread.
Graham Bread.
Potato Balls.
Sauté.
Pommes.
Neapolitan Ice Cream.
Fancy Cakes.
Mixed Fruits.
Salted Almonds.
Coffee.

Mayor M. S. Browning was the toastmaster for the evening, and as the New Year was just dawning, very appropriate toasts were given by Hon. M. S. Browning, Hon. William Glasman, Hon. H. H. Spencer, Hon. A. T. Wright and Mr. Todd Goodwin, of Salt Lake. After the elaborate banquet, dancing was resumed until a late hour. The following guests partook of the hospitalities: Messrs. and Mesdames Grant, Hansen, Pawlis, A. Brown, A. Wright, J. Pingree, Brick, E. S. Rolapp, H. H. Rolapp, Dalrymple, Clark.

Joe, Snowcroft, M. S. Browning, Tavey, P. Wright, Lewis, Eccles, Al. Matson, Joyce, Wadla, Glasman, E. Allison, Reynolds, Ad. Kuhn, Kuhn, Dee, Christensen, Haden, Carr, and Cook. Messrs. Kiesel, Schenck, Green, E. Kuhn, Burkett, Salt Lake, C. Tribe, Tribe, Healy, Bannister, Keller, E. Tavey, Boyle, Marks, M. Maguire, Smith, S. Kuhn, Mesdames Garver, Reed, and Fulton. Messrs. Monday evening Misses Sarah and Zina Larkin gave a delightful candy pulling party at the home of their parents, 648 Twenty-seventh street. There were present about thirty of the young ladies friends, and an evening of much merriment was enjoyed by all present. Various games and pastimes were participated in until near midnight when the candy pulling commenced, and as the old year closed and the new year was greeted a more happy crowd of young people would be hard to find, and wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year and Century were extended by all. Delicious refreshments were served in the dining room, after which the guests retired to the parlor, where vocal music and literary exercises were enjoyed, and at a late hour the merry crowd parted for their homes.

New Year's day the students of the State school for the Deaf and Blind were made very happy by a reception given them by Mrs. F. W. Metcalf. In the morning a very appropriate program was rendered by the students; at 1 o'clock a sumptuous dinner was served, after which a delightful skating party was held, the ice being in excellent condition. In the evening a reception was tendered the older students in Mrs. Metcalf's parlors. These receptions are given the students annually by Superintendent Metcalf and his wife.

The closing ball of Prof. Mose Christensen's first series was given Wednesday evening in his hall which was very beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers. Booths were arranged on the orchestra stand where refreshments were served. There was a large attendance. It was one of the most sociable balls of the season. Mr. Christensen will begin his second series of Wednesday evening balls next Wednesday evening, January 10th.

NEW CENTURY BOWS TO MISS HANNA.

The Greatest Coming Out Time Even for the Senator's Black-eyed Daughter.

Every Washington official of prominence who could get away from his desk was present at the debut of Miss Ruth Hanna in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium on New Year's evening, 1901. Miss Hanna's coming out gown, which is the creation of a New York modiste, was one of the surprises of the evening. It is of old ivory white, embroidered with gold. It veils an underdress of white tulle. The skirt is long and entirely plain save for a puff of white silk which encircles the bottom. The bodice is decollete with a tiny band of gold embroidery at the shoulder.

CLUB CHAT.

On Twentieth Century day at the Ladies' Literary club the program for the day is in charge of Mrs. Royle, and promises to be one of special interest. The program opens with a Modern Song, and a poem, The Girl of Today. Mrs. Sol Siegel will give a review on the book of the hour, "Eleanor."

An old-time ballad will be sung by Miss Ethel Paul. Poem: The Dawn of Poetry in the Nineteenth Century, by Miss Mary Hall.

The French section of the Ladies' Literary club will meet Tuesday night at 10:30, and will render a French play. All who may be interested are cordially invited to be present.

The History section of the Ladies' Literary club will meet at the club house Thursday, January 10th at 10 a. m. Subjects: England's European Position. Mrs. Miller; South Sea Bubble. Mrs. H. W. Brown; one minute talk on Dryden and the Pretender.

The Round Table club met with Mrs. Rachel Miller on the last day of the old year, the poet of the day being James Whitcomb Riley. Mrs. Sarah Karkiss was chairman. The table was decorated with American Beauty roses and the place cards were dainty calligraphs with a verse of the poet Riley written on each.

The regular meeting of the Council of Women's clubs was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The art exhibit given by the Ladies' Literary club will be reproduced in the schools during the coming term, the University, high school and others being on the list of those which will have the pictures and casts on exhibition. The Ladies' Literary club has arranged for the privilege of keeping the collection for two or three months so that there will be ample time for the schools to enjoy it.

The tabulated study by women of things that pertain to the spiritual side of life emphasizes the statement of Mrs. Lowe, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs. In her speech at Sorosis recently, she admitted that clubwomen take their work seriously, because it is constantly increasing in seriousness. To women, indeed, is to be left more and more. Mrs. Lowe thinks, the care of the spiritual growth of the race. Men are too busy in the strenuous material life of the day for much spiritual thought. They must grow in this way through women. Mrs. Lowe has undoubtedly taken note of the evident tendency among women in various parts of the country to accentuate the religious side of their effort. In Denver last spring there was formed, almost in a day, so great was the enthusiasm manifested, the Lectern League, whose ramifications in Colorado have already become important. At the recent annual meeting of the Illinois State Federation some of the most active and radical clubwomen spoke earnestly in a discussion on "How May the Church Be Influenced by the Woman's Club Movement?" in behalf of a return to more activity in church work. The sentiment of the assembly over the question seemed to be that the clubs had temporarily taken women from their church effort, educated and broadened them, and now it was time that they should be returned to the fold, to as now, in charge of the gardens and grounds of the department of agriculture, saw the letter. He sent an order for plants, and in 1870 received a shipment of a dozen young trees, all of the same variety, from the original stock having sprung all the far-famed orange groves, producing what is commonly known as the "Riverside Navel" (or seedless) orange," of Southern California.

To Poach an Egg Properly.

To poach an egg bring the water to a boil in a spider and a tablespoonful of salt to the gallon. Break the egg in a saucer, take the saucer in your left hand and with a fork stir the water round and round until it is whirling well. Slip the egg right in the middle of the vortex and keep right on whirling for a little while. When you take it out you'll find it's fair to look upon and not ragged as it would be if you had dropped it into placid water. It is not so easy as it looks, but a determined soul and an expert cook may do anything. The philosophy of the salted water is this: Salt water being harder than fresh, the eggs meet more resistance when it attempts to sag.

Music for the Child.

Children naturally love to strum on the piano from curiosity; some easily learn to pick out a tune with one finger; beyond that, only a few really love music well enough to bear its drudgery cheerfully. Yet all boys, as well as girls, should be able to read notes both for the voice and for the fingers; and so much, doubtless, they will learn in school. If possible, they should learn to play more or less, enough eventually to accompany a singer or read a hymn at sight. But it should be made as easy as possible; practice time should be short, never over half an hour a day when the child is under 12, and this divided into two periods. The real foundations of musical education on any instrument, the endless routine of scales and exercises, should not be insisted upon where there is a genuine hatred for them, for in the end it will be found that there is nothing gained by the trouble taken. By means of natural talent, only be sure there is a talent to be cultivated.—Harper's Bazar.

A Good Fellow Girl's Lot.

The woman of forty-five who owns to her age and could therefore presume to give advice to others was talking seriously of the comparatively young woman of thirty.

"Don't ever allow yourself to reach that stage of affability," she was saying, "at which people will call you a good fellow. I know that many a girl likes to have the name, and that girls are all likely to be attentive to the sort of girl who is called a good fellow. She is generally sure of having a good time. Men will take her out, always be glad to be at her parties, be very attentive to her, and she will have a very good time. But I have rarely heard of a man who wanted to marry her."

"Of course some men usually do marry her, because the girls who are good fellows usually find husbands. But the demand for them as wives is not relatively so great as their popularity with men. Girls with half the amount of a good fellow's qualities, but with a good deal more of the good fellow's type, are more likely to be married first. Men don't want for wives the women who are companions. They want women who appeal to their affections not to their sense of what is agreeable socially. I don't think, however, that girls who waited for years to marry, even when they had more men around them than the other type of women who was married at the end of her first year out."

"Don't get the reputation of being a good fellow, whatever men may think of you. I don't mean not to be fast. I do not take that into consideration at all, because that is vulgar, in the first place, and the cocktail drinking, loud talking type, which is the most in common with the sort of girl I meant when I spoke of her as a good fellow. The type I meant has nothing in common with the girl who is rapid. She can be as good as a good fellow, as well as as modest as the most shrinking type of intensely feminine woman."

"The popularity of the girl who is called a good fellow can usually be explained. I heard a man say the other day that he would always rather be with a woman than with a man. If he goes out to dinner, he prefers to be with a woman, and if he goes to the theater feminine society is more agreeable to him. He confesses frankly that the principal reason for this preference is his ability to do as he wants to, when his companions are women, whereas he would be compelled to do as the rest of the party wanted if he were not with a woman. If he goes to dinner with a woman he selects the restaurants that he prefers and orders what he cares to eat. A man may do that adroitly, even while pretending to consult a woman's taste most assiduously. If he goes to the theater he selects the play that he likes in the majority of cases and the woman has to like it too."

"Now the good fellow girl is likely to find a good many admirers among men of this class, who want a woman companion merely because she has more of her own way than if they go out with men. But it is not worth while, for the sake of any pleasure to be got out of it, for a girl to acquire the reputation of being a good fellow. It is likely to interfere with her more important aspirations for the future, and you know matrimony and a good husband will compensate a girl for missing a great deal in the way of a good time before the wedding."—New York Sun.

Travel in Comfort.

Wash the face as seldom as possible when traveling, as the dust and air render the skin very harsh if it is constantly damped.

The best way to remove any dust is to dip a rag in elder flower water (that most innocent and refreshing of toilet waters) and use that only. When the journey's end is reached, rub the face all over with a thin cold cream, and leave on until you make your appearance among your friends, when wipe off with a soft towel; then use a vaporizer (or sponge with warm water), and finish by laving well with cold water to close the pores and give firmness to the skin. If powder is used in traveling, it should be put on only to dust it off again. To keep it on makes the skin dry and harsh. At night rub on a very little cold cream when retiring as the close air and electric light are very injurious to the complexion, especially in hot weather. For a powder nothing is better than powdered magnesia—it is harmless and cooling—but it should not be left on long.

There is nothing, however, that refreshes one so much as washing one's hands with a good soap and water, but one should never use the soap provided for the public use, as there is great danger of catching infectious diseases—or, at least, annoying skin troubles—in this way. A little rubber sponge bag, with soap and sponge and a small, clean towel, does not take up much room, and is so very satisfactory that few travelers care to journey without it.

If you can choose your seat, choose the shady side of the car under all circumstances, as the sun often gleams as unremorsefully through closed blinds as when they are open. Carry a towel, for carry a soft silk-covered pillow too, for it will save many a headache and backache when one may not have the consolation of a corner to lean back in. And headaches and backaches are the worst possible luxuries in which to indulge, as they soon pierce all the good looks one may be possessed of.

As a last suggestion, be very careful, above all things, not to wait too long between meals. Carry neat finger sandwiches and biscuits with you to this end, though it is always possible, as a rule, to get refreshments of a certain kind. Still, these do not always meet one's requirements, and it is a better plan to carry a well-filled luncheon or tea basket along in a handbag, with one's accustomed fare, which will obviate any such difficulty, and fortify against unforeseen accidents.

Decline of Manners.

Mrs. Amelia Gere Mason discourses in the Century of "The Decline of Manners." Some of her keenest shafts are leveled at the girl of the period. It seems a trifle unjust to the clever and well-bred American girl to dwell upon a familiar type so much in evidence as to overshadow all the others and pass everywhere as representative, but it is a question of tendencies. There is nothing more contagious than bad manners; it is so easy for the selfish instincts to come uppermost when the pressure of a law, written or unwritten, is removed. The insolence of servants is sufficiently emphasized. The girl of the period is one with half-dissipated impertinence, without any disguise, and replies to your civil word with a lofty stare, as much as to say: "Since you are polite to me you cannot be of much consequence."

The causes are not far to seek. A potent one is the rush and hurry of life, in which everybody is intent upon doing the most in the least possible time. There is no leisure for small courtesies. Indeed, we claim, as a part of our national glory, the trait so well expressed by the word "push." It makes little difference what one pushes, so long as it stands in the way. Men in the earth are gentlemen, and the girl of the period, aside delicate women who happen to be moving before them in the procession. Well-dressed women run over one another.

It is the same spirit applied to the minor morals. Even the girl who sits on the Wall street maginate to walk over his weaker rival, and the laboring man who has organized in the name of freedom and human brotherhood to crush out of existence, if he can, his poorer neighbors who have not the spirit of initiative, though sometimes unconscious, selfishness, whether it be crudely clear or hidden under some high-sounding name.

Nor is the fact without its sinister influence that women, who are natural arbiters of manners as well as conservators of morals, have been driven by necessity into the hustling crowd. It is an alternative between struggling for a foothold in the struggle, or being trampled under foot, the triumph of aggression. This, in itself, is fatal to the self-effacement which is so strong an element of good breeding, and tends toward a radical change in the habits and traditions of the race, which must react more or less upon society.

By "society woman" I do not mean the type that first presents itself, the brilliant compound of style, dandy and Paris gowns, whose life begins and ends with entertaining and being entertained, who puts the fashion of a hand-shake. There are society women upon whom the mantle of the old-time lady has fallen, through nature or heritage, whose social gifts are the sum of many gifts, the crown of many womanly virtues. One finds them everywhere, women who cherish the fine amenities, who are gracious, intelligent, tactful, kind and active in all good works, who understand the things of the world, as well as the intrinsic value of things, and like to open their hospitable homes for the pleasure of their friends. It is such as these who represent the finest of our social life, and help to preserve the traditions of gentle manners, which are in the way of being trampled out in the mad march of something we call progress.

It is for these to ostracize vulgarity, to put up the delicate barriers which have been permitted to be let down, between the pleasant comradeship of men and women, and the loud note of familiarity, to temper the sordid spirit of commercialism with the refinements of that higher class of intellect which sees these things not only as they are, but as they ought to be.—Boston Herald.
