sixty odd miles." It took Joe a long time to feed his team, and during his absence a great deal of talking was done. When he returned Mr. Holton stood by the table looking very sober, and there were tears in the eyes of all the women when he said : "Joe, Jane has concluded she'll chance it with you. She's been a good girl always, and we hope you'll use her well."

girl always, and well." "I will, Mr. Holton, so help me God," solemnly answered Joe, and he walked over to where Jane stood and put his arms around her neck and kissed her. Then there was a general handshak-which was to be the piece de resistance of our evening meal.

"He has come for a wife."
"A wife! I did not know he was ac-quainted around here."
"He isn't. He wants me to recom-mend him to some girl who is strong, able, and willing to work, knows how to run a house and [hesitating a little as he saw the contemptuous curve of my mother's nose andmouth]—and I've -spoken—about Jane."
"Squire Black!" exclaimed mother, emphasizing her words still further by a dash of the pudding stick which sent the mush flying over the stove.
Jane was a farmer's daughter, who worked for us summers and went home winters to help to do up the spinning, weaving an the like.
A mutually satisfactory arrangement, as Jane's services were more needed at home in the winter than in the summer, and mother thereby saved the board Then there was a general handshak-ing, and arrangements was made for the wedding next afternoon, after which Joe and his wife were to come back as far as our house and the follow-ing morning start for home. The wedding was an old-fashoned country one, and not long after the ceremony Joe's sleigh was packed with a cargo of feather beds, quilts, blankets and house-keeping goods of varions kinds, and a nice cow (the pick of the heard) tied behind, for Mr. Hoiton would not let his daughter go empty-handed. Every second year after that for many home in the winter than in the summer, and mother thereby saved the board and wages of a girl during the winter when the work was not so heavy. Moreever, mother often said that Jane put the work ahead so when she was there that she could not keep her busy handed. Every second year after that for many years Jane came home for a visit. The intervening year she could not come because "the baby was too little to bring," and the numerous little Tolons grew up in regular succession, their heads mounting one above another like the rounds of a ladder. Father regularly asked Jane when she made these visits if she had come for her divorce. Jane always repiled: "Not this time.

put the work and and so there her busy there that she could not keep her busy the year round. Ah, help was help in those days. But to return to our kitchen. Father had chauged his position, getting a little out of the way of another charge from the mushpot, where the beating was soing on vigorously. "Mell, ma, Jane is not bound to marry Joe unless she wants to. But perhaps she'll never get another change is good. You know yourself that any one of Aunt Anna's boys is bound to make a good man and a smart one." "None too smart if he thinks to get a wife this way," smpped out mother. "Let him try, ma, if he wants to; let him try. It won't hart him to have the conceit taken out of him." No reply, but the mush was stirred as never mush before. Another panse. "You know, ma, Jane has been keep-ing company with that trilling Dan Marcy." for her divorce. Jane always replied: "Not this time. I don't see but Joe and I get along as well as those who take more time for their courting." And Joe, who was always holding the baby while Jane "undkd" the big-ger ones at the time this question was asked, would say approvingly, "That's so, Jane."

"None too smart if he thinks to get a wide this way," snapped out mother. "Let him try, ma, if he wants to i let him try. It won't hart him to have the conceit taken out of him." "No reply, but the mash was stirred as never much before. Another pause. "You know, ma, Jane has been keep-ing company with that trifling Dan Marcy." "Why doesn't he marry a girl who knows him if he wants to get married?" "Why doesn't he marry a girl who knows him if he wants to get married?" druggist said, placing both his elbows on his plated show-case and looking, his enstoner fairly in the eye. You have a lame back and want a plaster to put on it. You don't know me, and, judging of human nature as it runs in business. You are offered by the second in business, you are afraid Till humbug you in some way. You may think it an odd statement, but I can't afford to cheat' you. Even if I did I haven't the means.

"That's curious. (Oh, my back! I'll take chair, I guess.) Don't you keep plasters? "Oh, yes, one or two kinds. Once I has helves ifull of them-every sort that were ever invented to gull the ignorant and make oney for imitators. But I sifted 'em ou me by one, and now sell BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS principally. They always give satisfactio and in the end it pays me to soll them preference to all others."
