

the county attorney, who advised Mr. Hanson to swear out warrants against W. H. Parent, John Doe and Richard Roe, charging them with robbery and grand larceny. This was done, and the warrants being taken out from the city police office.

HOW TRICK WAS TURNED.

The day following the robbery a stranger called at Mr. Hanson's office and asked to see him privately for a few minutes. He introduced himself as Louis Maginnis of 323 east Broadway, Butte. He explained that he had been robbed of $275 by three smooth strangers who coming towards Salt Lake. He said he was sitting in the smoking department in the Pullman when a stranger entered and noticing a Miner's union pin on his coat, he asked to see it. Maginnis then tried to engage Maginnis in conversation, and presented a money bag containing the car. The two commenced matching dollars, man No. 1 winning every time. The second man pretending to be angry said, "Oh! We will not quarrel. Here is your money." The second fellow who was one of the money bag and returned to the interior of the car. "I can simply take that fellow's money away from him," said Parent to Maginnis. Parent then tried to get Maginnis to get into the game against the other fellow but Maginnis still refused to be inveigled into the proceedings. Finally Parent produced a check drawn out for $750. It was drawn in favor of W. A. Sommers on the Joplin, Mo., bank, signed by A. W. Tolmachev and dated Dec. 15, 1906. Parent explained that he had no money but would let Maginnis have the check if he could advance some money. Maginnis refused to take the check but turned over $275 to the stranger. A few seconds later a third stranger appeared and explaining that he was a railroad detective, broke up the gathering.

GOT NO SATISFACTION.

Mr. Hanson made every effort to have Parent located and arrested. He spoke to Detective Raleigh and Shannon a number of times but could get no satisfaction. He then went around and went to Newton in an effort to get some aid in running his man down. He received no encouragement and it was the last he saw of "fall down upon." The reason is perfectly plain. The suit case and grip were playing a mute part in these proceedings. They were left in the baggage room of the depot and Newton appeared one day, asking that he see them. The baggage man permitted him to see them but he refused to take them. The little attorney, refused to let them be carried away. Later Newton called Mr. Hanson up by phone and announced that he had a bill for $100 and the grip and suit case and had to have them. Mr. Hanson still refused to give them up and retained them until today when they were turned over to the state as evidence in the hearing now under way. If Mr. Hanson had taken the advice of his namesake, the county attorney, the grip and suit case would have been burned and what is now considered invaluable evidence would have been consumed because of ignorance of their real importance. Parent has told his attorney and the county attorney all about the Maginnis affair and has thrown some light upon the latter part of the case. The grip and suit case and Harry Walters were sent out of town for matching dollars. Parent remained here.

Whether or not the police stood in with the crooks, kept them posted as to the movements of the railroad detectives and generally allowed the bunco men to play their game of robbery and larceny for a "take-off on the profits" is left for the public to judge.

The police knew that the men were wanted and they did not arrest them.

IN THE HOUSE.

Galveston Government Bills Go Over Until Next Thursday.

The Galveston government bills will not be considered until Thursday. Four of the five members of the special committee to which these bills were referred, submitted a favorable report on the measures with the recommendation that they do pass without amendments, while a minority report signed by one member of the committee, recommends that the bills be passed as amended. The majority report is signed by the chairman, John G. Critchlow, and John M. Mills, Heber J. Meeks and Nephew Jensen, while the minority report bears the signature of Wm. McMillan. There is no difference in the reports except as to the advisability of amending the same, and these amendments will be considered on the floor later.

The probability is that the bills will be passed without much opposition in the house. The Salt Lake delegation is practically unanimous in favor of the bills with the exception of Mr. McMillan, who is also in favor of the bills with amendments suggested in his report, and the other members of the house have no special interest in the measures, except possibly the members from Ogden, who may ask that the bills be amended so as to apply to that ambitious city also.

The matter coming up for consideration, both reports were submitted to the house, and on motion of Critchlow consideration of the reports was postponed a special order for 2 p. m. Thursday.

SITS ON JENSEN.

Speaker Joseph and Nephew Jensen had a spat of brief duration immediately after the Galveston bills had been disposed of. H. R. 225 by Marks, relating to soliciting police contributions from employees of cities of the first class was under consideration. Mr. Jensen arose to object to a ruling of the speaker, who told him to sit down. Jensen persisted in his objection, when Joseph called the sergeant-at-arms and instructed him to request Jensen to take his seat. Jensen retired to the rear of the room, but did not consent to the action of the speaker, which was considered to be entirely unfair. But the end is not yet.

H. R. 146, which is Thompson's consolidation bill, came up on special order at 2 p. m. On motion of Thompson, son, the father of the bill, the consideration of the bill was placed in its regular order on the calendar. There are fifteen measures ahead of it and it will be considered probably on Wednesday.

COAL LANDS CASES.

Attorneys Plead on Demurrers in Federal Court Today.

Arguments are being made today in the Federal court in the cases of the United States versus the Union Pacific Railway company, the U. P. Coal company, the Oregon Short Line Railway company, Everett E. Buckingham and J. M. Moore. It will be remembered that the companies and individuals mentioned were indicted by the Federal grand jury in November last for alleged violation of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce act, and the alleged restraint of traffic and trade.

The last named allegation was made on complaint of D. J. Sharp, who testified before the jury that the Union Pacific Coal company and its agents conspired together to drive him out of business, and he was forced to forego his intentions of engaging in the sale of coal, after he had spent some $10,000 in providing coal yards. The defendants furnished bonds which the indictments were returned, and demurrers were subsequently entered. This forenoon C. S. Varian and Attorney Willis, representing the defendants, argued in behalf of the coal, Mr. Varian speaking first. Mr. Willis was talking when the time came for noon adjournment. An adjournment was taken until the afternoon, at which time the attorney will continue his argument.

DEATH OF W. A. HUGHES.

He Succumbs to Pneumatic Peritonitis Following an Accident.

After a lingering and very painful illness, dating from October last, W. A. Hughes, of the city engineer's office, died this morning at his home at 420 yesterday afternoon. A post mortem examination revealed the fact that death was caused by pneumatic peritonitis. During the month mentioned, Mr. Hughes met with an accident while going to his work at the city and county building. He gradually grew worse, and for three days before his demise he was unconscious. The deceased was 38 years of age, and is survived by a wife and three children. He had an extended acquaintance, and his death is deeply deplored by many friends. The funeral will be held tomorrow, commencing at 10 o'clock, from Hall's undertaking parlors, Rev. P. A. Stimpkin, of whose church Mr. Hughes was an earnest and valued member, will conduct the services.

CHICKEN COST HIM $25.

D. M. Henry was this afternoon tried on a charge of having stolen a chicken from the Royal meat market. Upon conviction, he was fined $25, and when he again wants a fowl he will doubtless pay it rather than purloin it, as that would be cheaper, about 25 to one.

HEBER J. GRANT CASE DISMISSED

"American" Party Hand Organ Now Due to Grind Out Doleful Dirge.

BERESFORD HOPE ALSO OUT.

"The Man of Millions" Will Not Have To Answer the Charge of Forgery.

In Judge Diehl's court this morning, on motion of the prosecution, the case against Heber J. Grant, charged with unlawful cohabitation, was ordered dismissed. This action on the part of the county attorney, for lack of evidence, will no doubt cause the hand-organ of the "American" party to grind out a dirge and cause one Charles M. Owen to throw numerous kinds of fits but that cannot be helped because the case has been wiped off the docket and another effort has been called.

There were no cases set in Judge Diehl's court this morning for the reason that he was called to Judge Whitaker's court to take care of the jury docket. But, Asst. County Atty. David Haigh asked that a number of cases be dismissed, and Judge Diehl consented to hear them.

"The county attorney's office desires that the following cases be dismissed, if the court please," said Mr. Haigh, and he then proceeded to read off a list of about 18 cases, among them the complaint against Heber J. Grant. The order was made and that ended the matter.

OTHER CASES.

James Donaldson, charged with grand larceny and robbery, was also dismissed, but the prosecution stated that another complaint had been filed against the notorious boot-leg gambler. Mr. Levy, the junk man arrested on numerous occasions on the charge of receiving stolen property, will not have to stand trial, and Robert Burns, accused of improper conduct, will escape prosecution.

The case against Beresford Hope, "the man of millions," who landed a number of easy ones while promoting many gigantic financial deals, was dismissed. The complaint charged forgery. An effort was made to arrest the English "noblemen" but the latter had important engagements which took him to parts unknown and when wanted he was unable to appear—because he didn't want to.

BUYS SIX ACRES.

Prof. Coray to Experiment and Make Home in the "Lowlands."

Prof. Coray, head of the department of economics and sociology in the state university, has hit upon a scheme by which he hopes to demonstrate the practicability of the scientific life as he conceives it. While in New York city a few years ago he spent much time studying the case of the environment and inspecting the so-called model tenements and other experiments for improving the life of the "submerged" classes, while these observations deepened the conviction that the most out of the helpless there was still a large and rapidly growing population, which includes the average college professors, who are not making the most out of their lives. Jammed into the bush and pull of the "strenuous life," along with the "hustlers" of the exchange, they have allowed themselves to be enveloped by the fast life of the city and the four walls of their home by night—and that is the measure of their day.

This method of being either useful or happy has not been the rule of the "model" for the average man. So for several years he has been watching his opportunity to make a test of certain sociological principles as applied to the home of the man with a moderate professional income.

With this in view he last week completed the purchase of a plot of ground in Forest Dale, which had been chosen especially for its adaptation to the purpose sought. The tract comprises about six acres, and embodies the two main tenets of the economic life of a model home for the average as can be procured for a moderate price within reasonable reach of Salt Lake City. This place he expects to develop largely with his own labor and that of his children as they grow up. Out of this aggregation of matter, muscle and mind he hopes to combine in their most stimulating phases the economic, the social and the aesthetic factors in family culture. The soil being of the marshy type, with certain elevated and warm spots fairly adapted to fruit, with a few small buildings, which he reckons among the advantages of the home, nearly everything adaptable to this climate, in quantities sufficient for home use. Asked how long it would take to complete his plans, he said he hoped not less than 20 years, as he expected to find pleasure in the moderate use of the land, and the resources of his six acres were exhausted before that time he should have to buy another place.

A. Basketball team to enter in the struggle for the middle western title which is to be decided at Evanston March 21, 22 to 23. He has asked President Sullivan of the national body to take a mail vote on the proposition. According to the Chicago press, the chances for the Utah five are good.

Dr. Plummer of Salt Lake and Physical Director Brown of the Salt Lake Y. M. C. A. have both registered long plays with the local officials asking that the team be allowed to enter.

GOOD BATHING NEXT SUMMER

Great Salt Lake Will Probably be Two Feet Deeper This Year.

DAMS ARE TO BE BLOWN UP.

Bars at Mouth of Jordan to be Touched Off and Utah Lake Will Contribute Its Waters.

The level of the Great Salt Lake is now one and a half feet above the zero mark, according to the official record in the local weather bureau, or two feet higher than it was a year ago at this time. Moreover, the level is 1-10 of a foot higher than it was at the highest level of last year. As the lake will continue to rise until July next, the chances for overflow of additional depth are considered good.

It is learned from Provo that Utah lake is up to compromise point, and the joint board of conference from Utah and Salt Lake counties has agreed to raise the planks at the foot of the lake and head of the Jordan river tomorrow, enough to let out 30 second feet, and thus prevent the flooding of the lowlands north of Provo.

This action is of special interest to Salt Lake county, the amount of water now in the river and spread out over the flats for a long distance south of the great lake is so great that the addition of 30 second feet will greatly increase the flooded area. The river is running bank full, due partly to the dams at the mouth built there by the sportsmen; but the county water commissioners have been urged to blow these dams up tomorrow, which will hasten the flow in the Jordan, and afford some relief. The canals are all running full, and the question is how to get all this water into the great lake with any degree of celerity.

FUEL SAVER INVENTED.

H. H. Maguire of Montpelier Shows Model to Oregon Short Line.

The Oregon Short Line is considering a device which tests indicate is a great fuel saver. It is a patent furnace, built along the lines of a locomotive and stationary boilers. H. H. Maguire, an engineer of Montpelier, Idaho, filed with the patent office at Washington about two months ago an application for a new blast furnace door and frame. The application was accompanied by a model. He has received a letter from the department that nothing along the principle of his invention is in the office, and that his contribution will receive due consideration. This is assurance that a patent will be granted.

The door can be used on all locomotives and its inventor is confident its use will mean a saving of from 20 to 25 per cent of fuel. The hot blast draft in heating stoves, it has been found, saves fuel by converting gas arising from soft coal into heat. This got Mr. Maguire to thinking, he argued that if a new blast draft could save fuel in a common heating stove there should be no reason why it would not have the same power on locomotives and other heating devices. He commenced experimenting with doors and was not long in building one he deemed good enough to send to the patent office. He exhibited the model and explained the principle to J. P. Dunn, superintendent of motive power of the Oregon Short Line. "It will be a great money saver if it does only half what Mr. Maguire claims for it," said Mr. Dunn. Master Mechanic Carriock and a number of engineers to whom Mr. Maguire has shown this model have told him that the door will undoubtedly grow into universal use when its efficiency becomes known. The Oregon Short Line will give the door thorough tests.

MEETING IN OAKLAND.

Wage Matters Being Considered by Various Orders of Railway Trainmen.

(Special to the "News.") Ogden, March 3.—R. M. McIntire, of Tucson, Arizona, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and S. V. Year, of Portland, general chairman of the Order of Railway Conductors, were in Ogden yesterday. They have been at Omaha in the interests of the employees of the western roads, and are making a tour on the owners of the railroads for certain concessions. They are en route to Oakland, where another meeting is to be held on Wednesday to hear the reports of the gentlemen. From Ogden A. S. Messenger and T. Conway went to the meeting to participate in the deliberations in behalf of the local orders. It is believed that the meeting for this week means that the railroad magnates turned down the demands made by the representatives of the orders for a new schedule of rates and wages, and in turn made a counter proposition which is now being considered. The meeting of Wednesday means much for the employees.

The odd device shown in the cut was sold recently at an auction of relics in London. It is known as "the drunkard's cloak" and in shape resembles a huge inverted flowerpot. Through
