chief executive for the State of Illinois expressed himself as being in the pink of condition, and after a few preliminaries proceeded to congratulate the State of Utah upon the result of the recent election.

"Utah is all right," he said, "and we had a good fight back in Illinols," he added in answer to an insinuation to that effect on the part of the reporter. "What was your plurality, governor?" asked the reporter.

"Well, the last that I heard was that it was some 74.240. I believe," he responded, and then added naively, "but it was not so big as McKinley's, which is something over 94,000, from the last reports I received from home."

After explaining the situation and the particular features of the fight that he had on his hands in Illinois with the various factions that were arrayed against his candidacy, the conversation drifted towards the career of Mr. Yates.

"Yes, it is true that at one time in my life I was a newspaperman," he said in answer to a query to that effect. "Do you know there is a fascination about that work to me, and reall" if I had money enough today, I do not know but I should run a paper myself. There is a Freemasonry connected with newspaper work just as there is among the railroad men. I suppose," he said,turn-ing to Mr. Ross with a smile, "I always had a weakness in that direction ever since I got short of funds after I left college, and took to reporting on the Jacksonville Courier for a couple of years some twenty years ago."

During the course of further conver-sation, Judge Yates made several inquiries regarding the situation in the State of Utah politically, and expressed a desire to meet Governor Wells and congratulate him upon his success at the polls.
