Francis A. Hammond, late president of the San Juan Stake of Zion, who was accidentally killed on Nov. 27, and whose funeral occurred in Ogden on Samuel Smith and Charity Edwards field, New Mexico, No. Sunday afternoon, was the son of Hammond, was born Nov. 1st, 1822, at Patchogue, Long Island, State of New York. His parents were descendants of the old Puritan stock, and were zealous in their efforts to train their children to reverence God and sto deal rightly with their fellow men, Francis A, inherited the sterling qualities of his parents, was sober and industrious, and until fourteen years of farm, materially alding in the support Young and others, had just completed age labored at the tan-yard and on the the family. Naturally studious he embraced very opportunity to gain knowledge, and at this early age, having attended the district school during the winter onths, he had secured what might be Hall, and was driving alled a practical education. Born and reared near the shore of the reat Atlantic ocean, he would watch he large merchant men come and go, nd boylike he was siezed with a suden desire to visit new climes. Gainng his parents' consent he at once set bout to gratify this desire, and suceeded in securing a berth in a small ailing vessel, receiving four dollars, er month for his services, and at the of seven years spent aboard ship ie had worked his way up until he held he position of captain's mate, a lucraive and trustworthy position. In 1843, fortunately for him, he startd on what proved to be his last voyage-on Wednesday, June 24th of this year he left thte harbor of Sag Harbor, ong Island, on board a vessel engaged n the whaling service. They rounded he cape of Good Hope, sailed through he Indian and Pacific oceans and af-er a successful cruise in the Arctic aters, having secured much whale oil d blubber, they at length turned r faces homeward. It was then that an accident occurred which proved the turning point in his ife. While storing away their cargo he ship gave a sudden lurch, misplac-
