The election of a municipal central committee is as follows:

Whereas, A declaration of principles was adopted at a convention of delegates of the People's Party of Salt Lake City, held in the City Hall, September 18, 1889, and

Whereas, Said declaration voices the sentiments and desires of the members of the party residing in Salt Lake City; therefore be it

Resolved, That this convention heartily endorses and approves the provisions of said declaration as to the platform of the People's Party and its candidates in the present political contest; and be it further

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves that we will labor to secure an honest election and the exposure and punishment of every attempt to prevent a free expression of the will of the resident voters of this municipality.

By the time the last vote for aldermen was taken the delegates had become extremely weary, and some variation of the monotony of waiting while the ballots were being counted was ardently wished for. In a moment of inspiration some one suggested that Mr. David McKenzie give a recitation. The idea was endorsed by hearty applause, to which the gentleman kindly responded by rendering the thrilling poem, "The Engineer's Story," in a magnificent manner. His effort met with an encore, to which he responded by rendering, in fine style, a humorous piece.

Prof. Paul was next called in for a recitation, and gave "The Creeds of the Bells," in an admirable manner.

Thomas Hull was next called for, and in response he rendered, with fine effect, a humorous selection.

The convention, after some discussion, voted to choose a municipal central committee to consist of twelve members, two from each precinct and two at large. The following were elected: First Precinct, J. H. Paul and C. W. Penrose; Second Precinct, J. C. Cutler and J. H. Moyle; Third Precinct, W. J. Lewis and J. N. Pike; Fourth Precinct, F. W. Jennings and F. S. Richards; Fifth Precinct, Alonzo Young and Francis Armstrong.

Hon. A. Hatch, under a suspension of the rules, responded to a call for a speech, which was replete with good points and rich humor.

Votes of thanks were extended to the management of the Theatre for the use of the building, and to the chairman, secretary and tellers.

Mr. Kenner introduced a resolution, which evoked some lively discussion, and after being amended wore the following form, and was adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the central committee take charge of the campaign, arranging for meetings in every ward and making all preparations for a thorough canvass; that meetings be held every night except Sundays.

A motion was put and carried that a grand ratification meeting be held in the Theatre, January 29.

After a motion to adjourn had been put and carried, the chairman stated that if delegates would retain their seats a few moments they would see something.

After the benediction was pronounced, red fire began to show through the curtain, which was raised, disclosing a tableaux entitled "After the Election." An immense anchor was draped in red, white and blue. Above it were the Stars and Stripes, and near it was a man in grotesque costume, holding in his hand a carpet bag labelled "P. V. Junction." As the curtain rose he slunk out of sight.

It was fully half-past five o'clock when the convention finally dispersed.

A STRONG TICKET.

THE ticket of the People, so far as completed, is a strong one and cannot fail to meet the best expectations of the party. This is not only asserted within the lines of the party, but the fact receives the assent of many fair-minded men of the opposition. It is a powerful head supported by a vigorous body, the entirety being representative of brain, bone and muscle. When the whole selection is finished it will present a symmetrical entity that will command the respect and be entitled to the votes of the overwhelming majority of the electors of Salt Lake City on the 10th of February.

Since the foregoing was in type the ticket has been completed, and appears in connection with the report of the proceedings of the convention.
