

ies it might not increase the health of the people. So we must sweat it out until the leaves begin to rustle in the evening breeze, and then for eight months our climate is delightful.

Much credit is due to the officers of this county for capturing the three men who murdered the Indian agent and blacksmith on the Muddy. Last Monday, Sheriff Seegmiller, deputy sheriff A. P. Hardy, and posse of four men, left here and proceeded up the Santa Clara, having heard that these desperadoes were in that locality. When some fifteen miles above the Clara settlement the party separated, the sheriff, Seegmiller, taking two men with him, proceeded up the creek while A. P. Hardy, deputy sheriff, and two men turned and proceeded down the creek. Before going far they discovered the tracks of three men, and the deputy and aids, being used to Indian life, continued to track them until they were convinced that they (the murderers) were in a thick clump of brush. Consequently they dismounted, left their horses in an open spot of ground, and crept stealthily forward until they "freed" their men. The deputy and aids called upon them to throw up their arms, which they seemed reluctant to do, when he deceived them by looking towards the horses, and calling out, "You are surrounded. Close in on them, boys." The desperadoes, seeing the horses at a distance, and supposing there was a large posse, threw up their hands and were speedily disarmed, but were much chagrined when they found out that a "ruse" had been played on them, and their captors numbered only three, the same as themselves, and they under cover and well armed. William Pulsipher and Dudley Levit were the posse who assisted deputy A. P. Hardy.

The sheriff of Lincoln County, Nevada, is here, and will leave for Pioche, with the prisoners, tomorrow morning. He gives much credit to the officers of this place for their perseverance and courage, manifested in capturing these desperate murderers, in which he says the people of Lincoln County unite.

The prisoners are a "hard" looking set of young men, none of them more than twenty-eight years of age. It is to be hoped they will have a fair trial, and if guilty no doubt meet with the "demands of the law."

Our Conference closed last Sunday. No changes of note. Subjects—union, home manufacture, etc. Reports from the different wards were encouraging.

AMRAM.

A ROMANTIC STORY.—A belated Christmas story, but so romantic and sensational as to warrant telling even at this late day, has recently appeared in a San Francisco paper. Ten years ago two brothers migrated from Illinois to San Francisco. The elder was steady-going and capable and speedily found employment, but the younger was dissipated and unreliable. They parted by mutual consent, the former to grow in his position until he became a partner in the firm, the latter to sink to the precarious life of a criminal. The older brother married a rich woman, moved into a mansion, and became the father of three children. Last Christmas eve the family retired about midnight, but the gentleman had hardly closed his eyes when he was awakened by a noise down stairs, and moving stealthily to the parlor with a revolver in his hand, he saw a man endeavoring to open the buffet where he kept his silver. Leveling his revolver at the thief's head he exclaimed, "Stop, or you are a dead man!" The jimmy dropped from the hands of the burglar, who, falling on his knees, cried out: "As God is my judge, Robert, I did not know that you lived here!" The gentleman then discovered to his horror that the burglar whom he was about to shoot was the younger brother whom he had not met for nearly ten years.
