

DEMOCRATS OPEN THEIR CAMPAIGN

Indulge in Strong Talk at Saltair Annual Outing About "Machine Rule."

"NO FUSION" IS WAR CRY.

Directly Accuse the Republican Party of Utah With Being Responsible for American Party.

The opening guns of the Democratic congressional campaign were fired yesterday at Saltair. It was Democratic day, and a fair-sized crowd gathered at the resort to listen to a program of speeches and band music, and to dance through the evening that followed. Formally, it was a day for the Salt Lake county Democrats but Chairman Martineau had informally secured the support of outside leaders, and there were speakers and listeners present from Provo, Ogden and other points. The story, almost every bit of it, was shaped into denunciation of the Republican party in Utah, and of its leaders.

"Who said fust?" shouted Hon. B. H. Roberts, and in answer he demanded that there be an uncompromising fight against the Republican party, and a steadfast refusal to join with it. The Republicans were styled the real founders of the American party, without whom its existence would be impossible, and it was clearly evident from the trend of the speeches that the Democratic platform will be built to fight the present management of the Republican party in Utah, and of its leaders.

The most impassioned speech of the day was one not down on the regular program. Hon. B. H. Roberts, who was Chairman Martineau standing in the audience and was called to the stand. He refused to come at first, but finally yielded, and when he commenced to talk it was evident that he felt deeply the situation which the party has at present to meet.

ROBERTS' SPEECH.

Recalling the reconvened convention of 1895, he urged that the platform then adopted again be called into service. At the height of his speech he took up the matter of the relation of his Church to politics in Utah and he declared that it guaranteed absolute political freedom to every man. His speech in part was as follows:

"In doubt as to the wisdom of responding to your flattering invitation to address you, for the reason that it is very likely that you Democrats will be accused of injecting church influence into your gathering, and I want to take you to witness that if that shall be done you and not myself am culpable, because I was standing in the ranks of my political party listening to the sentiments that were being expressed and giving approval to the eloquent utterances of my political friends and would have been entirely content in that honorable if humble position. However, I respond to your invitation, and you are responsible for what comes of it."

In hearing discussed national and local issues I am tempted to say that the thought that really Republicans, local or national, is off the same piece." The speaker then called attention to the news conveyed in the dispatches that Senator Beveridge, the mouthpiece of administration, had announced the entrance of the chief executive of the nation into the present campaign involving congressional elections. "And," he said, "that is in bad taste and as much to be condemned as senatorial intrusion in a municipal campaign. I have a few words to say about both issues. Senator Beveridge formally opened the Republican campaign in the state of Maine. He announced these ideas: that the issue before the American people is not so much economic as it is moral; not so much present success as the moral regeneration of the commerce of America. We have lost sight of the moral phase of American commerce, and the only possible deliverance in commerce in America is: 'Thou shalt not steal.' He means that, evidently, as a nation we are in such moral degradation that our sins cry to heaven for reform." Mr. Roberts declared that "the only method of reform was to have a clean man at the head and vote the Democratic ticket."

THERE IS NO PEACE.

Continuing, the speaker said: "A word with reference to our local conditions. I had hoped that we could escape them without mention, but it is impossible. There arise cries of 'Peace, peace, but there is no peace,' and we might as well face conditions as they are. In looking over an old scrapbook I came upon some remarks I made in 1895 at Provo. I called attention then to the relation that properly existed between church and state, the right of the individual as related to both church and to state, and the conservation of those rights to him. I expressed the thought that security of these rights and the proper recognition of the right relationships existing between church and state and the individual and his religious and political rights were best preserved, and would be preserved by the adoption of Democratic principles by the people of Utah. I have no occasion to change the views that were then expressed. I believe them today. The salvation, politically, of the State of Utah rests essentially in the hands of the Democrats of the state."

"What I want to say may be best expressed by the relation of an incident which occurred at this pavilion within two weeks. A Republican friend said to me: 'What you Democrats want to do is to take where you belong—join with us and destroy the American party, and then let us fight it out between ourselves afterwards.' What the matter with the Republicans getting where they belong assisting us Democrats to put true policies of government into operation and settle not only the agitation made by the American party, but the distress that has come to the state through the Republican party also."

DOES NOT "MINE" WORDS.

"If one of the issues in this campaign, locally, is to be a so-called vindication of the senior senator of this state, in answer to that I wish to say that no Democrat in Utah owes any allegiance to Reed Smoot. That gentleman, in his ecclesiastical position, I honor him in that. If there be any intrinsic justice in his claims for retention to his seat in the senate of the United States, the question of retaining that seat should rest upon those intrinsic principles of justice. If he cannot retain it by virtue of those principles, he ought not to retain it, because he can demonstrate that he carries the political power of this state in his pocket. That is a question that belongs entirely to the past, and not to the present or the future. The senate of the United States has the whole question before it."

"The perpetuation of the idea that a man can dominate by his will and by 'true of ecclesiastical position the political policies and the political destinies of this state should not add anything to his claim to the seat he occupies. It is best to talk freely about these things. We have passed the point where we can mine words."

"For my Church and for that superb man that stands as its recognized head. I wish to say that the Church—I mean the whole body of the people—and the Church is bigger than any man in it—I say that the church deserves the individual that the Church deserves the individual political liberty of every man and woman in it. I wish to say that the splendid leader of it, to him I give my individual allegiance as a religious leader under God—I say that he recognizes that freedom of the individual."

HITS SECRET WORKERS.

"If a man pretends to speak in his name publicly—they dare not—but if they pretend in secret and by surreptitious methods to represent him in any other light than as declaring in favor of the separation of church and state and the elimination of religious influence from political affairs, then I brand them liars and hypocrites. It is not true, and for one I lay my hands upon the man and the evidence and so help me all proper powers. I will bring them to task. They shall not disgrace my Church, nor slander its president. They have no right to do that. The authorities of the dominant Church of this state stand pledged by a series of official utterances running through many years of this policy of right of the individual to be politically free, and henceforth, for one member of that Church, I will not tolerate the 'Bussy' Andersons and the rest of them in slandering both the Church and its officials. So far as that question is concerned, I am settled, and it is settled in this state in accordance with the sentiment and with the conditions of the American people. No priesthood, however so disposed, can dominate a free expression of the will of the people in the great and grand republic of the United States."

In the speech of 12 years ago I expressed the hope that I should live to see the time it would not be necessary to mention the terms Mormons or Gentiles, and in political contests we could eliminate all reference to sect connections, and I still live in hope. Twelve years of experience lie between, and I say now that experience only goes to confirm the hope and thought in all the years of the past. Yet do I believe the time will come that that happy time will come by adherence to Democratic principles and trust in the Democratic party."

NO FUSION WITH REPUBLICANS.

"Who said fust?" It's Republicans that fuse and it's Republicans that divide and create so-called American parties. Unite the Democrats and do it upon true Democratic doctrines and Democratic principles and stand firm. Reaffirm the platform of the reconvened convention of 1895, if you will. In the heat of that time we may have been misled as to some of the details, but as to the principles there is no mistake. Reaffirm it and support it on the issues."

MARTINEAU PRESIDES.

City and County Chairman L. R. Martineau presided at the meeting, and addressed the audience from the orchestra stand. He introduced, in addition to Mr. Roberts, Mayor Conroy of Ogden, former Mayor W. M. Roylance of Provo, Hon. Jas. H. Moyle, former candidate for governor, and Fisher Harris, exponent of "See America First." In his opening remarks Mr. Martineau referred to the Republicans as the only united party in Utah today, and urged them to stay united while their opponents were pulling each other's hair from day light to day light. He provoked applause by his mention of the name of Hon. William Jennings Bryan, whom he said would soon be welcomed on his native shores again.

MAYOR CONROY.

Dr. Conroy opened the oratory against the Republican party. He referred to Ogden's Democratic victory, and to the methods which resulted in a Democratic defeat in Salt Lake.

"It was the rankest kind of injustice."

the program as originally planned. He referred glowingly to the commercial progress of the state, which he declared could never reach its proper proportions until the present political strife is allayed. Of the local political situation, he said:

"My distinguished friend, Senator Smoot, the founder of the American party, must understand once for all that whatever virtue he has will be lost unless he stops attempting to control the politics of this state."

Following the speaker, dancing was indulged in until the last train came into the city at 11 o'clock.

FOREST DALE'S BIRTHDAY.

Pretty Suburb as Proud of Its Anniversary as Boy With New Boots.

A large delegation of people from the Forest Dale ward journeyed to Wanda-mere yesterday to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the organization of their ward. After spending a pleasant afternoon at the park, the residents of the ward gathered at a secluded spot where a fine luncheon and refreshments awaited them. Five long tables had been erected, which, after having been clothed in linen and decorated with flowers, were spread with a luncheon which brought forth many words of praise for the committee.

At 6 o'clock 300 people were seated at the tables ready to partake of the supper which was offered to all residents of the ward without charge. The father of the ward, Bishop James Jensen, called the assembly to order and made the following brief but apt address of welcome: "As you are all aware, we have come together today to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the organization of the Forest Dale ward. As bishop of that ward I welcome you one and all. Ten years ago at this time we were a bunch of the Sugar House ward, but later that evening we were organized as a ward by the Salt Lake stake presidency, Angus M. Cannon, Jos. E. Taylor and C. W. Fourness."

"We started out on a very small scale. I shall never forget that evening nor the feelings I had on going home from that meeting. I perhaps felt worse than any of you who were present on that occasion, because I knew what it would cost to run a ward organization and I did not know where any of it was coming from, but I can say this night that there has not been a day from that time till the present when we have not had ample of everything. And when I look back over the history of the Forest Dale ward, my heart swells with joy and happiness and praise to God Almighty for His blessings to the people of our ward."

"When I think of the little sickness and few deaths and trials we have had and how well they have been endured by those who have had them, I feel truly thankful; and I feel to say God bless the people of Forest Dale ward. Many of our friends have wondered why it is that we have prospered as we have done, both temporally and spiritually. I am told that though but ten years old, we compare very favorably with the average wards of the Church, which is a very pleasing thing to know. I have been sustained by the people, and I often ask myself the question: How is it? Oh, how is it that we have got on so well? What is the cause? What has been the motive? Why has the Lord blessed us as He has done during these ten years?"

"Is there any man or woman who will deny the statement that it is because of the unity and harmony that has prevailed in our midst, and because you have stood by those who have been called to preside in your midst? I believe it is because of this unity that God has blessed our efforts, since the organization of the ward, and we have come together today as one family to celebrate that event. May God grant that in ten years from now we can come together under as favorable circumstances as we have met this day. Let me admonish you, my dear brethren and sisters and friends, to do in the future as you have done in the past. I desire to thank you all for the support you have given us in this work, not alone our brethren and sisters, but our friends in our midst who are not of our faith. They, too, have stood by us nobly and have assisted us with their means. They have held up our hands and never have they said 'go,' but everybody has come forward as one man. I believe the brethren in charge have never said 'go,' they have always said 'come,' and the people have nobly upheld the hands of the brethren. God bless you, my brothers and sisters and friends. May peace and love and unity prevail in our midst in the future as in the past, and may God's favor be upon us in our prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen."

The bishop then created considerable merriment by introducing Senator S. H. Love in the following words: "I now have the pleasure of introducing one of the old residents of Forest Dale, who was formerly an adobe-maker, but now he is a law-maker—Senator Stephen H. Love."

In the evening the ward choir boarded the steam launch and sang a number of appropriate hymns, after which the evening was spent in dancing.

W. M. Roylance of Provo, spoke next. "Don't fuse," was his doctrine. "I find there is a sentiment in some counties to fuse with the Republican party. Don't do it. People are getting tired of this politics and bossism. They won't stand for it any longer. I know thousands of Republicans who are tired of present conditions. Why are they tired? Because if your boy or my boy were a certain position in the government, they would be for it. They would be for it. I say this condition is damnable, and will not be permitted any longer."

"We have postmasters in Utah county who draw salaries of $200 from the United States per month. About one hour per day would cover all the real duties they perform. One man I refer to has railroad transportation and he is first lieutenant to Senator Smoot. He travels from one end of the state to the other to fix up things for Reed Smoot. They have even made official positions for people and it is time that those things were stopped."

JAMES H. MOYLE SPEAKS.

Hon. James H. Moyle took up the history of recent years in Utah politics wherein in his belief the Republican party had tried to carry whistlings of alleged Church desires to its membership and to the hurt of Utah's peace.

"All the Republicans had done was to look to the Church and select some men in the Church who could exercise power. This should not be in this state. They have sent a distinguished and honorable man and high ecclesiast to the senate, and what has it brought us? He could not be elected, but he was the influence of the whispering people, or more properly speaking, conjurers of the state, who have claimed they were carrying out the alleged will of the Church, for which it was claimed that it was necessary that the Republican party should be in power to carry out the will of the Church. And what has this infamy done? Distracted and cursed the people, cursed only by the follies of the Republican party and their mistakes, a hiss and a byword throughout the state. And there at the head stands a distinguished ecclesiast."

SAYS THEY TAMPERED.

"And they have also been tampering with the judiciary, of all things that should be held sacred. Yes, and a greater calamity. But for their conduct and aim there never could have existed in this state a party calling itself American. But for the follies of the Republican party there never could have been created such a party in this state, and worse than all this, the distinguished leader of the Republicans in Utah, but for his mistakes and the mistakes of his party should be in power to carry out the will of the Church. And what has this infamy done? Distracted and cursed the people, cursed only by the follies of the Republican party and their mistakes, a hiss and a byword throughout the state. And there at the head stands a distinguished ecclesiast."

RING OF MYSTERIOUS POWER.

The statue of the Virgin in the cathedral at Madrid wears on its finger a ring which is the subject of a popular legend. Alfonso XII gave it, it is said, to Queen Mercedes. She died one month afterward. The king then took the ring and presented it to another member of the royal family, who succumbed immediately to a stroke of apoplexy. Two other persons who afterward wore the fatal ring met a like fate. Alfonso XII did not then dare pass it to other hands.

He kept the ring himself. Three months later the throne was vacant. The people of Madrid say this ring of the Virgin has a double power. It kills almost immediately those who are not absolutely worthy to wear it; or, on the contrary, assures the happiness and long life of the sovereign who will restore to Spain its former glory. It is believed that the present king, Alfonso XIII, before his marriage piously touched and kissed this mysterious ring, and because he did so was spared in the recent attempt at assassination. This conviction has taken root at Madrid, where the people are extremely superstitious; but persons in the immediate entourage of the young king would dissuade him from following in the footsteps of his father—Le Cri du Paris.
