Its practical operation is conservative and methodical-its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West-unsurpassed in the world.

ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLREPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

Among the Britannic's passengers was C. P. Huntington, the railroad magnate. Fay Templeton, the actress, was said to be among the Celtic's passengers.

MR. HUNTINGTON had closed his house for the summer, and along with his family intended to take an excursion to Europe, which he has never visited—"and I did not get there after all," said he laughingly to there after all," said he laughingly to a Tribune reporter this afternoon. He was looking strong and well. "The bowsprit of the Celtic came right on board; the Celtic cut through nearly to the middle of our ship and probably would have cut quite to the middle but for the facts that we were going somewhat rapidly and to the Celtic's cutwater and right away. I think that is what saved us. The Britannie's bulwarks were cut right off for fifty feet. The Celtic tore her way right along. To my knowledge there were four people killed; one was a girl about twelve ple killed; one was a girl about twelve or 14 years old, and there were three others, two men, I think, and one boy but I would not be certain about that. The oldest man's wife was on board. Several others were injured. Dr. Mc-Laughlin, the ship's surgeon, remained cool and collected and attended to those who were hurt."

THE MESA COUNTRY. Ancient Ruins in Arizona—Unearth ing Skeletons.

Mesa Cirt, Arizona, May 13th, 1897. Editor Deseret News: This mesa around Mesa City is an open, level country as far the eye can reach to the south and southeast, while west, north and east, here and there, spurs of moun aims rise up out of the level like Antelope Island out of Salt Lake. The lower land, from which It is distinguished as the mesa (or table land) is nothing more por less than the old Salt River bed. On this mess and other places round about are

THE RUINS of several towns and villages in the shape of piles of dirt, once dwellings, but of what date or by what people inhabited has not yet been decided, that I know of. Many canais used by the same people for invigation same people for irrigating, are also still plainly visible. These houses were probably made of the clay or adobie. A hollow or excavation near each ruin, shows where the dirt has been taken from for each building. On digging into these piles of dirt the lower part of the walls are still to be found. In or near each of these ruined towns or cities is to be found one or more buildings, much larger and more prominent than the CONTRACT OF COMPANIES state or other public house. Three of these I have visited in different places. They seem to have been built more to the square, and compass rule than the others. They are from perhaps 7 to 10 rods wide and from 15 to 20 rods llong, standing the long way, due north and south. The ruins of a wall (likewise on the squar ) surrounding them, are and the ground around about, are covered with pieces of broken pottery. I notice that the natives peddle a similar ware to-day, in the shape of large jars, called overs, in which the people keep their drinking water in hot weather.

A few days ago whild some boys were excavating a new canal, on the edge of the Mesa, (a mile north of this settlement and near the same distance from ment and near the same distance from the river) with three plows and scrapers, they cut the edge of one of those old rains, and in close proximity, came upon and took one of the bones FOUR SKELETONS.

They said some were face downward and one was lying across the feet of another—hearing of this I went to the place myself. They showed me the bones which they had put in a pile and covered with some dirt. The skulis they had not found. We then began to scratch nearthe same place in the edge of the same ruin, and soon came upon the lower extremities of another skeleton. Following it in we soon came to the todies of two—(the ribs and backbone) both close together. one of them was an infant; the other frown. Following up we soon found grown. Following up we soon found the skull of a grown person, the teeth seemingly sound. But the skull commenced to crumble as soon as taken out. The strangest part of the matter is, these skeletons were near together in the same ruin, and in, and under the loose dirt of the ruin, and on top of the ground. They were not in the hard gravelly ground beneath, (as if they had been hurled) but seem to have been slain, and the village sacked and burned over their heads. All through the loose dirt is charcoal, mixet, as if from the wood work of the house. from the wood work of the house.

Is the Oriental salutation knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bow-els are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indica'e how the whole system is deranged.
