Carfield compared present print-ing arrangements with that prevailing before the war when in four years $100,000 had been contributed out of the printing fund for political purposes. McMahon has made an uncontradicted statement that the democrats would appropriate nothing for a special deputy marshal and that they cared nothing whether the law was constitutional or not; thus casting contempt on the Supreme Court, which had declared it constitutional. McMahon said Hayes and Bur-rough had insulted individual members of the democratic party, and these insults were baseless. He referred Garfield to the nullification record of the republican party in Ohio on the Fugitive Slave Law. Derisive laughter on the republican (Derisive laughter on the republican side.) He warned the republicans that it would be useless for them to flaunt the bloody shirt before the American people. He wished there was a statesman on the other side willing to rise above party strife, who could, like the President, say there was something else in the country besides mere party, who could overlook the past for a little while and let the country prepare for the great trials of the future. He alluded to the Monroe doctrine in connection Burrough declared it was the deepseated purpose of the democratic party to nullify the laws they disap-proved. It was part of their great scheme to get control of the government, to seize it at all hazards; that the party could be tracked from the South over the blazing homes and the Capitol.
