Hers has been a most interesting career. She has, it will be readily seen, tasted of the privations and dangers attendant upon ploneer life. There is not a section of the state that she has not visited and searcely a condition among the people that she does not under-stand. In the last few years she has traveled much and has spent considerable time infroad. During her recent stay in South America she took up a study of the Spanish tongue and made recellent progress therein. That study she still pursues and if occasion should require her to return to Peru where her nusband has signatic business in-

She has been an industrious help-meet, a wise counselor to her husband, and has assisted him materially in amassing and maintaing the big fortune that is his to control. Pos-sessed of a nature strongly spiritual, Mrs. McCune takes an active part in all matters that pertain to the religious welfage of her away and the welfare of her own people and of the people of the world. FROM FAR OFF JAPAN.

Items of Interest From the Missionaries Working in That Land.

Letters received from the ladies who are laboring with the party of missionaries in Japan, state that the various Elders have for some time been working out in the field among the people, living with them, talking with them, and holding meetings among them. Mrs. Augusta W. Grant writes an interesting letter to friends, from which the following extracts are made: "Our Japanese friends had eaten dinner with us, and they came in to supper and spent the evening. We enjoy visiting them and going out with them, for we learn so much, both about the country and the language. We can ask all the questions we like and not have to depend on books. And they are so nice, especially Miss Mashimo. We feel tice, especially Miss Mashimo. like they were friends of long standing. She is just as pretty, and wholesome looking, I would not mind bissing her. And they have such dainty, pretty clothing, silk crepe kimonos, never bright or gaudy in color, and such dell-cate pretty shades at their neck, around the long hanging sleeves and at the bottom of the skirt, sometimes five different tints that harmonize exactly, and give them a very dainty appearance. They are very lively and talk Japanest just as fast as they can talk, and although we don't understand half they say, and they only know about three English words, we all seem to enjoy it and have a fine time. Our outing insured us a good night's rest, at least I slept soundly all night, but the folks down stairs had another burgiar scare. The boys were sure they heard "u man" on the roof of the Japanese quarters, and after holding a whispered council, they dressed in overcoats and surrounded the house, deter mined to catch him this time. Brother Jarvis climbed the roof, and the boys waited for the man, but he never came and they were forced to admit that it must have been a cat or the wind blowing about some loose part of the

After our pic-tures were taken we went into the schoolhouse, and saw part of their program, music and a dialogue by the program, music and a diatogue by the fapahese and a reading in Sanscrit by an East Indian. Then came Brother Ensign's song. They had an organ, and were putting it up on the little stage, but he told them it would be all right where it was: they said they wanted to see the "little lady" who was going to play for him, (Mary, who is anything but little compared with the Japanese) or they out up the organ.

Brother Ensign sang, "O ye mountains high," and we all joined in the chorus. They seemed very much pleased with it, clapping for every verse, and when he had finished that Brother Ensign sang their national song in Japanese. and their national song in Japanese, and we with all the audience stood up and joined him, singing with all the spirit possible. They seemed delighted with this. We got up to go after this, their entertainments are always at long with this. We got up to go after this, their entertainments are always so long that we get tired. This had been going on since I o'clock and it was now after six. But they would not let us go until we had "tea," which we never drink, but they said they had "kwashi"—cake—and insisted on our going out into the garden, where we had our pleture taken, and at the top of this little hill, under a pretty tree they served us with oranges, raisins, and cake. This cake was made of a ball of rice with a little piece of pickie stuck in it, Around this was a layer of sea moss, and outside was the dough. It was not baked, but seemed to be steamed or boiled. They filled our pockets with boiled. They filled our pockets with oranges and gave us bags of their cakes, candy and beans that tasted like popoorn to take home with us. The ranges are little Japanese oranges not like ours. There is just a word or two more that I want to add. I hardly had room to sign my name last night, and in reading it over it seems to be chopped off short, and I hardly know where to commence again. There was one thing I was going to add, the reason I think the flowers here are so attractive and make such a pretty picture. The flow-Brother Ensign was invited to sing at the opening of a new school for girls near us here in Jotsuya, and we all went to hear him after meeting. There was a great crowd of Japanese people there, all standing on a little hill in the garden waiting to have their pic-

And speaking of town a flower garden. But the sur-enerally known, but roundings here are so different. Every fact, that Mrs. Mc-bility in the field of there are lovely pine groves, here and and the different colored howers min-gled with the beautifur green shades have an added charm that we miss with our bleasoms at home. We have just been out in our garden today looking at the great variety of shrub trees and flewering plants, There is one cher-ry tree that we think the prettiest we have seen onywhere, and I think there are at least 25 different kinds of plants It is very interesting to us, we have been looking at these same trees ever since last gummer, when the flowers had gone, and every day some new surpriseg are in store for us, and we see some hare tree burst out into bloom, with a kind of flower that we have never seen before. Many of the trees have not lost their leaves all winter and now the new leaves are coming out with a faint green color along with the dark green leaves that have been on all winter. Even our rose trees un-der the window have not lost their leaves, and there are many more trees the same. Some of the leaves that come out are colored almost like au tumn leaves, and that looks ver strange to us. I have pressed several right will send some home, but the boys have tried several times and made a falfure of trying to press some o them. The camellias are too thick; they are like the "most double" roses, and in pressing them they are crushed and speiled. There is one kind of tree with bright red herries on how, too, and there are many different kinds of cherry trees, some white, some pink, deeper pink and some double like little roses. Now I think you will surely be tired hearing about "flowers," but we are just reveling in them. I will not have any more to say, though about them and will give you a rest at least them and will give you a rest at least until the other kinds come into bloom. There are still the "lotus," "wisteria," etc., that we have seen pictures of and

tet., that we have seen pictures of and heard so much about that we have still to see later.

I must tell you about our guests to dinner yesterday, and then I will be at the end of my page. We had a Japanese young man whom Brother Featherstone was entertaining, and the East Indian gentleman that read the "sanscrit" selection at the entertain-ment. They had some trouble with their knives and forks, the Japanese said he was not accustomed to them, he used chopsticks; and the Indian said he was not used to them for in his part of the country they use their fingers only, but we tried to instruct them, and they managed to get through with the dinner. The Indian said that was the first time he had ever tasted beefsteak, or beef in any form, and in some parts of his country they were forbidden to eat any kind of meat.

Montana Mining Man's Personal Property Estimated at More Than $9,000,000-Big Claims in Courts.

cus Daly, who died in this city on Noveinber 12, 1900, left a fortune of more than $11,000,000. This consists of personal property both in this city and Montana, aggregating $9,630,639,22 of which there is a not personal estate in this city amounting to $1,458,427.20, and real estate, not in this state, of a valuation of $1,470,835.42. There has just been made an appraisement of the personal property in this city for the purpose of fixing the tax to be imposed upon it. It has been shown that the only personal property left by Mr. Daly at the time of his death was money on deposit, with the exception of the leasehold of the property N_0 , 725 Fifth avenue, where Mrs. Daly now resides. He had on deposit in the National City bank one account amounting to $197,995, and a special account in the same institution for M. count in the same institution for $1.-209,518. In addition to this there was on deposit with Wells, Fargo & Co., $81,936, and the value of the leasehold of the Fifth avenue residence is placed at $5,000. This makes a gross personal estate in this state amounting to $1,585,-451. From this there are deductions 451. From this there are deductions aggregating $127,014, which leaves a personal estate here of the amount

The special account in the National City bank of $1,500,518 was opened a few days before the death of Mr. Daly and when he was so ill as to be unable to sign his name. It was made in the form of a deposit of a check of William Rockefeller, for money which he owed to Mr. Daly for transactions in merit which both were interested. It was Mr. Daly's intention to have used this money primarily in the purchase of stock of the Amaigamated Copper company,

As nearly as can be estimated, Mar- | of which he owned at the time he died of which he owned at the time he died 67,300 shares. The other account in the National City bank was from disidends paid upon shares which Mr. Daly held in the copper company.

There are claims pending against the estate of Mr. Daly amounting to more that $1,600,000. One of these is in an action brought by the United States against the estate in Montana to recov-er $1,365,000 for traspass on govern-ment lands and the conversion of timber removed from it. Another is an un settled claim of P. J. Shields for 258. 900. Mr. Shields insists that he was partner with Mr. Daly in a coal min and also some mercantile enterprise. There is also on action pending in Montana, brought by John H. Maloney and others to recover $50,000 from the estate

Mr. Daly did not leave any real property in this state. There has been paid a United States government tax of $131,407 upon the personal estate in Montana and a state tax there of $81,-290. The amount of the tax here has not yet been determined.

not you been determined.

Mr. Taly's entire estate, under his will, was bequeathed to his widow, Margaret P. Daly, who received one-third, and his four children. Margaret Daly Brown, Mary Daly Gerard, wife of James W. Gerard, Marcus Daly, Jr. and Harriet H. Daly, each of whom received one-sixth. The will was pro-bated in Deer Lodge county, Mont., Mr. Daly having been a resident of Anacon-da., Mont.—New York Herald.

MRS. HELEN L. MOORE DID NOT CARE TO LIVE.

As summer advances we are too prone to neglect the little ills and the warning symptoms of disease, simply because we are not suffering acute pain. It is a well known fact that in summer we too often neglect the necessities of the system. Never forget that sleeplessness, nervousness, headaches, back and sideaches are forcible reminders of fatal diseases. We should therefore at this time grapple with the trivial aches and pains by using Paine's Celery Compound, the great blood purifier, nerve bracer, digeative regulator and system builder. Tender Green Peas. Fresh green peas seem as necessary and

Fresh green peas seem as necessary and as fitting an accompaniment to spring lamb as the indispensable mint sauce. To enjoy this delightful combination it is best to wait until the spring lamb is a reality in the markets and not a pleasant fiction, unless for the sake of nevelty one desires to indulge in Easter or hot-house lamb. This luxury coming so early in the season—the green peas must, for this reason, be correspondingly high in price if bought in northern markets. Their high price seems to be their chief-recommendation with many, but those who await the home grown, find the most pleasure in their cating, for green peas, like fresh corn, soon lose their sweetness as well as tender crispness, unless they as well as tender crispness, unless they are cooked soon after gathering. When buying green bea, see that the pods are a freen green and brittle and the peas showing no sign of changing from the bright green to a yellow tinge that denotes that they have reached the stage when they are no longer green peas but ar approaching he sere and vellow leaf. Most varieties of green peas are small, but the marrowfats grow very large and are very tender while young. There is one variety cultivated which, when young, has such tender pods they can be caten as well as the peas.

Always wash the peas.

Always wash the peas before shelling the peas. They may appear perfectly clean, but cannot be free from some objectionable matter gathered from impure water, in dust, insect poisons, or eggs of insects, or even in handling when gathering for market. A noted objection has said that there would be few diseases.

possibility it is well to aveid all probable chances of swallowing misplaced matter which will produce disease in the human body. If by chance the peas become will-ded before they can be cooked, shell them at once and soult them in cold water for an hour or longer until they become firm and origin.

an hour or longer until they become firm and crist.

Unless you wish to use the water in which green beas are boiled for making a soup do not have too larse a quantity of water-find enough to keep them barely covered and let the water boil down when the yeas are setting tender; in this way you retain all the good qualities of the peal, as you can serve them without draining the liquor serving as a sauce. Add sait is minutes before the peas are done and butter and peoper just before taking from the fire. The liquor may be thick, and by rolling a little flour in the butter, or by adding heaten yolk of an egg or two. Do not allow to boil after eggs are added, but cook a few minutes until sauce is smooth and creamy.

When peas linve lost their natural sweetness add from one-half to a teaspoonful of sugar to every half-peck of peas.

Sugar Pea Pods.

These are the small variety cooked without shelling. Select them while the peas are scarcely fermed. Wash well in cold water age throw in a kettle of boiling water. Boil for half an hour, adding saft when half done; then drain and warm in butter, Stri in a little cream mixed with beaten egg yolks and a few drops of vinegar. Serve at once. They may be dressed plain with salt, pepper and butter.

Puree of Green Peas.

Boil until the peas are tender enough to press through a steve; then place in a saucepan and stir in enough hot cream or milk to make the mixture the consistency of mashed potatoes; season with butter, pepper and salt, and a very little sugar lif desired. Use this puree for a garnish or border around a dish, pressing through a pastry bag into fancy shapes or pressing in a border mold, or the mixture may be "riced" bu butting through a vegetable press, heaping lightly into mound in the center of a heated dish with breaded lamb choks, lobster or fish cutlets arranged around the base. Hard boiled egg makes an effective decoration for top of the puree mound giving a very spring-like dish.

Stewed Green Peas.

If the pods are tender and green and thoroughly washed, boil them until soft and then remove with a skimmer and boil the peas in the same water. When nearly done aid the sait. When tender thicken the liquor with butter and flour rubbed together—two level tablespoonfuls of each. Add pepper to taste. Cook five minutes and serve.
