longer. Don't feel uneasy when you find your eggs covered with a thick, jelly-like coating. When you get ready to use them simply wash the coating off, and you will find your eggs as fresh as ever. Water glass costs 50 cents per quart.

To use cold lamb, ham, or beef, mince it fine with half the quantity of ham and quarter as much bread crumbs. Season with a small onion (if not objectionable), salt, and pepper. Mix this with an egg and any gravy that may have been left from the roast. Put in a baking pan, cover with bread crumbs, and bake for half an hour. This is a good dish for luncheon.

Apply this idea to a gown that needs altering. Suppose you have a frock of dark blue voile, as every one seemed to have last spring. It is frayed at the neck; the yoke is out of style and soiled. Cut it low back and front—a little lower than you think you want it—for it is not at all pretty when too high. It may be rounded into T shape or a half circle. Bind it with blue or black velvet ribbon and make the two straps also of this. The cloth is better if you have it. Then take a fine blouse of lace or flannel that you had last summer. Line it with China silk.

the better. The most popular and pleasant way of serving the egg is in sherry. Very little is needed in the glass. Into this the egg is broken, and it is then swallowed whole. One will be surprised how easily the egg slips down the throat and the pleasant taste it leaves. Some believe that half the benefit of the egg is lost if the yolk is broken. The best time to take raw eggs is before meals, especially breakfast. After taking this diet for a week or two, it should be discontinued for several days and then resumed. Raw eggs are more easily digested than cooked ones. Hard boiled and fried eggs are the most difficult to digest.

Fattening Oysters.

The oyster-eating public is almost familiar with the process of fattening adopted by some unscrupulous dealers in oysters, says Country Life in America. This consists merely in throwing the oysters into fresh water which they absorb in large quantities and become plump. The flavor is thereby injured and there is danger of infecting the oysters with typhoid fever. At Lynnhaven, Va., the United States bureau of fisheries has been working for several years on a plan to establish an artificial fattening bed for oysters. The oyster lives chiefly on diatoms and other microscopic marine plants. These plants require for their growth a large supply of inorganic salts in the water. The necessary plant food is supplied by putting commercial fertilizers into the water. The fattening bed must

THE ELEMENTAL TONE.

Wind of the mountain night—Great spirit of the air—Thou comest with a voice of might That bids the earth beware;

Weird and magic power Whose force the soul divines Resounding through the worship-hour In organs of the pines.

Rain of the torrent-sky—The herald of the cloud—

On silver clarion echoes by Your music bold and proud.

Wave of the than sea, Thou moonest on the shore In ope eternal threnody Beginning evermore.

Hark to the wind!—whose motion Is like the sea's refrain. And hark!—that roar of ocean Is blended with the rain.

Out of the universal We hear one voice alone—

The wind and wave and rain have all The elemental tone.

LONG COATED VELVETEEN MODEL.

Velveteen, one of the fashionable winter dress fabrics, is introduced effectively in this early model, showing new fashion points in its long, fitted cut and broad button trimmings. The front and back gores of the coat are at the bottom in curved tab effects, while the black silk buttons and loops, applied a la militaire, are novel and attractive. The "V"-shaped neck is outlined with Irish lace and finished with a handsome cord and tassel ornament, the ends of which reach to the coat edge. The skirt is perfectly plain, of walking length, and made with hip-length plaits stitched flat to allow a well-fitting skirt top.

Babe, who left last evening for the German mission field.

Thursday evening a most enjoyable Thanksgiving ball was given in the city pavilion.

Mrs. A. R. Anderson spent the week in Salt Lake City visiting relatives.

Mr. J. M. Kirkham has been spending the past two weeks in Chicago and other eastern cities.

Mrs. Amanda Roberts of Blackfoot is visiting Lehi relatives.

Mr. Richard Bradshaw of Magrath, Canada, has been in Lehi the past week shaking hands with friends.

Miss E. Mae Campbell spent the first of the week with Salt Lake friends.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Wells spent Thanksgiving with Salt Lake relatives.

Mrs. E. A. Caldwell of Ogden is visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Geo. Schow is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Webb, of Idaho Falls.

JAPANESE GOODS AT AUCTION.

An immense stock of art goods from San Francisco, will be sold daily, commencing at 2 p. m. and 7 p. m., at 65 So. Main Street.

In Women's World.

If you possess a bit of Chantilly or Spanish lace, which has been stored away for generations, get it out and replace for now is the time to wear it. If you have no such heirlooms, the modern maker can supply the want, for never in the history of lace-making have more beautiful "antique patterns" been put on the market.

A capricious little whim is now going the rounds with society women of any pretense toward things ultra. It is to wear little bows or rosettes of the same shade of hair at the side of the culture or in a semi-circle on the crown. The idea is a Parisian one, and is being adopted by many women of taste on this side. The little fluffs or rosettes are amazingly and are arranged to nestle under the bandeau of the hat.

These long tufts are one of the most promising fads of the season, and will be made oftentimes of a material quite different from that of the brocade. They follow the line of the arm closely and fit snugly, and may be fastened either with a row of tiny buttons or slipped on over the hand by means of narrow elastic stretched at intervals of an inch or two across the two edges of the underseam, which is sewed and pressed open in the usual manner. Of course, and then it is a satisfactory method; but great care must be taken that the edges do not spread apart, although a fly should be sewed to the under side and held in place by a small hook.

Select perfectly clean, fresh eggs, place them in a stone jar in a cool cellar and cover with a solution of one part of water glass (sodium silicate) to ten parts of pure water. It is best to wash the water; cover the vessel tightly, and the eggs will keep 10 months or cut off the sleeves just over the turn of the elbow and add a band of black velvet.

People suffering from tired feet should remember that the large pores of the feet carry off many of the impurities of the body. Unless the feet are kept perfectly clean, these pores become closed and the feet are not as healthful as they should be. This will often cause tired feet, of which so many people complain. The feet should be bathed every day. At least once a week they should be scrubbed with soap and brush. It is a good idea, after the daily bath, to rub the soles of the feet with a dry brush.

The medicinal qualities of pure olive oil are numerous and are becoming better known day by day. A teaspoonful taken after each meal will relieve constipation and dyspepsia. Mixed with an equal part of lime water it is invaluable for burns. Poured into the eye it will remove any foreign substance lodged there. It is a sure cure for hang-nails; is good for chapped hands; is excellent rubbed over the whole body after taking a bath, and is beneficial for use in massaging a dry scalp.

Those who take raw eggs as a tonic declare that an egg is spoiled by any kind of cooking. The freshest the egg
