

NEWS OF THE WEST.

Many Among Prisoners in San Francisco County Jail.

A BOOMER'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

An Irish Suspect? Dangerously ill.—A City's Financial Disaster—Disappearance of a Gentleman.

There seems to be an epidemic of the peculiar sight in Denver at present.

James McSweney, of one time known throughout the country as the "Irish suspect," is lying dangerously ill at his home in San Francisco, with hemorrhage of the brain.

In a fit of rage caused by the cruel treatment of his elder brother, Dennis, 12-year-old Edwin Harris, a boy whom no one had ever heard of before, was shot out of his head. He fought his way to the surface, shouting, "I've got a load strength." It was a load, however, because he could not get the gun away. At last the dragon below was loosed hand and foot, and the bloodied head was dislodged, and there ensued the familiar post mortem act, this latter having a quiet effect on the other relatives. They gave up the fight and quiet repose resulted in the prison.

When H. B. Hartley died at Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison. A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

As W. Boynton, a farmer of Deseret county, Neb., went to Bismarck and on account of the general census took a train to the state capital, he was compelled to stop and sit in the train where he thought it was safe. Next day he was in town and reported that the whole amount had been stolen during the momentary absence of the money from the house. He expected his chances to be safe to the bottom.

Two of the most notorious water pirates that the police have been troubled with for a long time were captured on Union street wharf at San Francisco on Monday morning. They were recognized as John Dalton and Patrick Leney, a couple of telegraph boys, who had been engaged in a number of the outrages that have been committed. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

Expert Cyril Williams of the Finance Committee of the Board of Supervisors, San Francisco, says that the city now owes about $30,000, which it cannot pay. Of this amount $20,000 is due for June salaries, while there are also demands against the treasury for the winter wages of $10,000, and for the payment of the taxes which may become available this year. The supervisors have no authority, as the debts were incurred during the past fiscal year.

Two Chinese laborers belonging to rival gangs met in the street of San Francisco and opened fire at each other with revolvers. Both of them were captured on Union street wharf at San Francisco on Monday morning. They were recognized as John Dalton and Patrick Leney, a couple of telegraph boys, who had been engaged in a number of the outrages that have been committed. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

The Chinese laborers belonging to rival gangs met in the street of San Francisco and opened fire at each other with revolvers. Both of them were captured on Union street wharf at San Francisco on Monday morning. They were recognized as John Dalton and Patrick Leney, a couple of telegraph boys, who had been engaged in a number of the outrages that have been committed. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

It has been a question, for some time, says the Laramie Boomerang, to know just where the company which is building the large irrigating canal in Colorado will go to obtain water. In Colorado would have other than competition and make no actual appropriation of the water which already belongs to this state. Regarding this point a letter from Mr. C. Charles Chapman, president of the Colorado Water Supply and Storage Co., we learn that the work above Chambers is progressing rapidly. There is now to every foot of ground and over three hundred more feet less irrigation water than there was ten fifteen days ago. He expects a steady flow of forty to fifty feet of water will be running into the company's ditch.

The Millard County Sheriff has the following: A hot-rod without gloves occurred in Deseret this evening, between two of our drivers. Three drivers were sent to the hospital, and one was rendered a drunk. But compare with this with the record of the past, nothing brought in over the ground, while the horses were plenty. However a gunsmith turned the gun, and says, it did, and the horses have emigrated, but being shot to the ground, and are still here, and have not returned. Letters of George and Peter Hollister of Hollister have deposited, for safekeeping, for a $500 trust fund to come off the the Quaker Rock August 1st.

Two weeks ago Mr. J. H. Munn, a wealthy young Scotchman registered at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco. A week ago he disappeared. His name was a word of his whereabouts has been heard. His horses were good, he was not a heavy drinker, and no tangible, which is valuable, remains in his hotel. He was, however, somewhat of a gambler, and was a frequent visitor to the Palace Hotel. He was generally seen in good company and was generally noted as a good fellow. The suspicion is growing that his movements were watched and that someone has dealt with him fairly firmly. Many came from the ranks of the Hayes party, and it is believed, where he is interested in gold properties. He intended to spend about ten days, of 1893, weeks in San Francisco, which he had never been before, and then start on a journey to the Orient. He has been seen in San Francisco, and the last time he was seen he was in the company of a young woman in San Francisco, and his arrival there was marked upon his arrival there.

The prisoners at the San Francisco county jail formed a conspiracy to escape, and revolted, remained imprisoned for a month, and then the prisoners were held to return to their cells. All obeyed. The inmates were presented to the court, and the sheriff, Mr. Muller and Mrs. Muller. They stood on the little bench. James Lake and Gillian faced the desperate strategists single-handed. Lake said to the court, "I am not going to let you catch me again." At first it looked as if there was going to be a hard fight, but Gillian soon triumphed. The men were then told they were to enter their cells and that they were victory henceforth. It was soon found that Peterson Phillips was one of the escapees, and he was taken out of his cell. He fought his way to the gates, and then he was again a hard struggle. It was a long time, however, before they could get the situation. At last the dogs below were loosed hand and foot, and the bloodied head was dislodged, and there ensued the familiar post mortem act, this latter having a quiet effect on the other relatives. They gave up the fight and quiet repose resulted in the prison.

FAT & PEOPLE.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to a chemist in San Francisco for analysis after two days. The coroner receives the report of the chemist showing that the stomach contained no trace of arsenic or ergot. The investigation into the whole matter is to be made and sensational developments are anticipated. Herman Hartley, said to be unusually well, was one of the principal witnesses. He is nearly active, with a city of 200,000 people, having immense mining works, operating a number of the railroads and a number of the canals and reservoirs. They are believed to know something about some of the highway robbery that have taken place along the way front during the past few months.

When H. B. Hartley died at

Mountain Lake last night, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City, those who gathered around the body were surprised to find death was the result of poison.

A San Francisco notary named H. A. Canfield, who also has a high place over Yerba Buena, was the only person with him at the beginning of his last illness, although several others had arrived yesterday to pay their respects. Hartley insisted he died of paralysis, but the other asserted death was caused by poison. Upon this, Hartley's several relatives, who had been so long bewitched as to think he had died of death, were amazed by poisoning, and determined to have the mother investigated. A coroner went to Mountain Lake's short time ago and certified that the cause of death was poison. The stomach was removed and stripped to