The Situation—A Dull Time Anticipated.
The Journal's Washington special says the national capital is assuming a state and unprofitable aspect of vacation period. Nearly all the senators and representatives have left for home, and the President and heads of departments and bureaus, and many of the clerks are packing up preparatory for a resting spell.

A very dull time will now be upon us. Could not the two parties agree that the long session, with all its investigations and turmoils, has been a very unprofitable one to the Government, the country, and especially to the democratic party.

Many of the best and wisest of our countrymen are forcibly taking sense of the fact that the silver legal tender bill failed to become law, believing that it would have been an effective solution of our financial problem.
