GUS SHOWS FIERCENESS.

At 10:15, when the men, answering the gong, came to the center, speculators went through the crowd offering 2 to 1 on Sharkey. At these figures there was a heavy play, and the talent did the paying. As the men sparred to an opening, it could be seen that Gus showed improved footwork and greater cleverness in avoiding punishment. Ability in that respect coupled with his natural advantages, gave him a superiority which he nexer walved.

He also showed fierce punishing pow er, and it was only Sharkey's super-vitality that kept him from defeat carlier in the battle. He used his right and left with equal facility, and made them both count. He lacked in agres-siveness, and if he had gone in could have finished the battle much earlier than he did. He allowed Sharkey to make the pace, and although he met him determinedly enough when he came he did not press all of his advan-res. He used his right to excellent advantage, and time and again stepped in after the chunky Irishman had swung at him and made his blow count. Sharkey, with that marvelous ag-gressiveness which has made and marked has pugilistic career, made the bace from the square-off until he was helpless. Each round brought him closer to it. Ruhlin kept away from his wild swings and desperate leads, and kept hammering is left and right to the face and body. He cut the sailor's face until it was bathed in blood, and marked his chest and sides where he planted his powerful punches. They clashed in desperate clinches and were oken time and again. Sharkey showed an inclination to rough it, and with wrestles in the clinches, and the unsympathetic crowd hissed and hooted Cries of "foul" rang from the at him crowd, but the referee refused to inter-

The finish was dramatic. Sharkey had strugled through the fourteenth round by desperate effort, and was but little revived when he came up for the fifteenth. Ruhlin sprang in and beat the Irishman down the floor with a volley of punches. he resolute fighter strugled to his ext and when Ruhlin came in lutched him around the waist. would have been a charlty. Sharkey went down for the third time, but with dogged determination staggered to his feet. He was blind and insteady, and a punch put him down. The referee stepped in and ended the contest. Sharkey was helpless, Billy Madden sprang into the ring and kissed his protege, and then alded in Carrying him from the ring. He was unimarked, while Sharkey bore a score of bruises.
