

ANDERSON LEVANTS.

A Trained Collector Leaves With His Employer's Money.

MR. F. A. SORENSON A VICTIM

Only a Case of "Who Stole" Collected—He Tells About It

After Anderson, a man 20 years of age, was employed for some time by Mr. Sorenson to the capacity of collector, in which position he has worked very satisfactorily until now.

About two weeks ago Anderson's weekly collections began to diminish and were asked for a reason, he told Mr. Sorenson that he was not feeling well and that he had not been able to collect his regular amount.

On Friday night he entered the office and took some of his money, and he was not feeling well and that he had not been able to collect his regular amount.

Mr. Sorenson at once called a physician, but he would not, preferring to keep on with his work and bringing to about half of the regular collections.

On Friday night he entered the office and took some of his money, and he was not feeling well and that he had not been able to collect his regular amount.

Mr. Sorenson at once called a physician, but he would not, preferring to keep on with his work and bringing to about half of the regular collections.
