"ARTICLE 47."—Miss Ada Gray and "Article 47" made their first appearance, before a large audience, at the Theatre last evening. Of Miss Gray as an artiste there can be but one opinion, that she has a good deal of ability, and takes a high rank in her profession; but we think her powers could be displayed to greater advantage than in "Article 47"—a piece in commendation of which not much can be said, it having a Frenchy, low moral tone, and from beginning to end, being a reflex of scenes and circumstances in real life among the demi-monde. The heroine, Cora Delafield (Miss Gray) is a creole, a coquette, of easy virtue, her relation to George Duhamel, (Mr. Chaplin) a man of fortune, and her enthusiastic admirer, being that of mistress. Duhamel squanders his wealth upon her with a lavish hand, but finally she, as if weary of his attentions, flirts with "Victor Mazieller," Mr. Marden, "a man of leisure and pleasure," which leads to a scene between her and Duhamel, during which the latter, in a fit of jealousy, discharges a pistol at her, the contents lodging in her face, marring her beauty and causing life-long deformity. Burning for revenge, she prefers a charge of theft, and assault with intent to murder, against Duhamel, for which he is arrested and tried, the trial occupying the first act of the piece. On the charge of theft Duhamel is acquitted, but convicted of the assault, and sentenced to five years at the galleys.

Cora moves to Paris, opens a fashionable gaming house, and carries on her trade for several years, among her best customers being the Count De Rives, who, one night, brings along his son-in-law, George Girard, formerly Duhamel, who, having served out his time at the galleys, has moved to Paris and, under the assumed name of Girard, has woed and won the daughter of De Rives. At sight of him Cora's love is re-awakened, and stung with jealousy at the thought of being the husband of another, she determines to win him back, or denounce him to the authorities for violating Article 47 of the criminal code, which requires a former convict to reside in a certain city and to report himself at stated intervals to the police authorities, and in default again consigns him to durance vile. Cora makes known her determination to Duhamel, whose former love is now turned to hate, and he repels every advance, but dreading her threat—to denounce him to the authorities, or to expose him to his wife, he makes a compromise, by frequenting her establishment and playing at the gaming table in her behalf, she, every time he is present, exerting, but in vain, every imaginable wile, to win him back. Finally he determines to be her slave no more, but rather to tell his wife about his former connection with Cora. He announces to the latter this determination, and she in a fit of frenzy and delirium, sends a written expose to the police authorities, and Girard is arrested and incarcerated.

Filled with remorse for what she had done, and impelled by her unextinguishable love for her former admirer, Cora then uses her wealth freely to procure a pardon, succeeds in doing so, and, first taking poison, she proceeds to the prison, sets her old love free, and the curtain falls as she expires in the presence of, and while imploring the forgiveness of him and his wife.

The roles of Cora and George Duhamel were sustained with great ability; the support throughout being efficient, Miss Walters doing what little she had to do with her usual ability. The piece will be repeated to night.

OPENING THE WALKER HOUSE.—Yesterday afternoon there was a grand formal opening of this fine hotel, three or four score of invited guests participating, among whom were Gov. Geo. L. Woods, Judges McKean, Strickland, Morgan and Rosborough and Secretary Geo. A. Black; also representatives of the press, and of the mercantile, mining and other leading interests of the Territory.

The guests were conducted over the polished staircases, the beautiful Brussels and velvet carpets, through the magnificent building, the most finished and complete establishment of the kind from the Missouri to the Pacific, and of which a detailed description has already appeared in these columns. After surveying the admirable internal arrangements of the house, the guests were led to the spacious dining hall, where they were regaled with an excellent collation, to which ample justice was done. Toasts and speeches came along in their order, the enterprise of the Walker Brothers and H. S. Greeley & Co., being the principal subject commented upon by the speakers—with an occasional branch ing out from this to other themes. The speakers were: Governor Woods, Judges McKean and Strickland, Captain Selwyn (English), Judges Morgan and Rosborough, Messrs. De Wolf, Barron, Chislett, Maxwell, Godbe, Pearce and McLeod.

The speech of the occasion was made by Captain Selwyn, the noble sentiments to which he gave utterance doing credit to the head and heart of the speaker. In alluding to the mining interests of the Territory he stated that English capitalists were ready to pour unlimited means into the lap of Utah for the development of her mineral resources, and all they asked in return was the just and impartial administration of the laws, that they might have assurance that their investments would be secure. He also advised the dropping of all the wretched differences and contentions relative to religious creeds and views, which had been so pregnant a cause of unhappiness to the human family since the beginning of its history. It could readily be observed by the nature of his opinions that Captain Selwyn is by no means an unworthy representative of a country, the people of which, above all others, are credited with an intuitive desire for the administration of what is commonly termed fair play.

Judges Morgan and Rosborough, and Messrs. DeWolf and Barron expressed sentiments which, we are pleased to say, were in every sense kindly and noble, and in unison with those enunciated by Captain Selwyn. We were pleased to hear such sentiments expressed, as on such occasions, which are always supposed to be of a peaceful and pleasurable nature, acrimonious insinuendos are, "like a hog in a drawing room," entirely out of place, and can only be uttered by those who have been "badly brought up," and are ignorant of good breeding.

The company broke up about five o'clock, everybody going away satisfied that the proprietors and lessees of the Walker House, in the possession of their fine and well appointed establishment, have before them an excellent opportunity of obtaining a fair share of the patronage of the traveling public.

JOSEPH E. TAYLOR, Sexton.

THIEVES.—Thieves and pickpockets were busy in the circus last night. Several individuals among the audience found themselves minus their purses at the close of the performance, while others searched in vain for missing shawls and other articles. It seems as if there still were numbers of simple, honest-minded people here who appear to imagine that Salt Lake City has not materially changed since the advent of so-called civilization. People who go to circuses and other places of that description nowadays should look to the safety of their pockets and loose articles of apparel.

INDIAN RAID.—It will be seen by the following that the Indians south are still on the rampage:

"SPANISH FORK, Sept. 1, 1872.

Editor Deseret News.

"Last night five Indians stole from this place seventeen head of horses and three colts, six head of which belong to Stephen Markham. The raiders drove them up Spanish Fork Kanyon. Some of the brethren went up the kanyon to-day, to find out what direction they took, and, ten miles up found two of the poorest horses, which had been left behind.

"A. K. THURBER."

THOSE DISPATCHES.—It may be interesting to some of our readers to know how those lying, Salt Lake, dispatches, a specimen of which we published yesterday, are manufactured. A little scene, which was described to us as having occurred in a back saloon in a building on East Temple street on Thursday afternoon, immediately after the abatement of the two houses of ill fame on Commercial street, will give some idea of the matter. In the saloon were a prominent U. S. official and two individuals associated in the public mind with certain untruthful telegrams. The trio were there engaged in manufacturing a sensational and inflammatory press dispatch on the abating, by the police, of the Commercial street dens of infamy. A gentleman, who is not prejudiced in favor of the "ring" or its doings, was pacing to and fro in the entrance hall of the building, when the elegant offshoot of one of the dispatchers came out of the saloon and informed the gentleman alluded to that "father" and so and so and so and so were getting up a press dispatch on the Commercial street affair, and they wanted to get "Pat's" assistance, and he was going to fetch the latter. Of course "Pat" was brought. He is a power in such matters, is "Pat." It took the trio to drive the nail home, but it took "Pat" to clinch it.

The dispatch being finished, with the assistance of "Pat," the official came out of the saloon where the gentleman was walking to and fro, and the latter put his hand on the official's shoulder, saying, "Your name is"——?" "Yes." "Let me see, are you the——of Utah, or is it the man whose name has a metallic sound?" At this point the language of the official became not only vehement but positively inelegant. "Stop," said the gentleman, patting him on the shoulder, "it doesn't seem exactly right for the proprietor of a b——le class to swear." Exit official, in high dudgeon.

A NICE shower to-day.

INCORRECT.—Our thermometrical notice yesterday was inadvertently inserted uncorrected from Saturday's notice.

PROGRESSING.—The work of the basement of the building in course of erection on the Winder lot is nearly completed, being now upon a level with the sidewalk. The foundation is of red sandstone, and is very substantial. The upper portion of the building will be brick.

THE CIRCUS.—Last night the circus was crowded with people, who manifested their appreciation of the scenes in the ring by enthusiastic applause. The proprietors must be well satisfied with the patronage extended to them during their stay in this city, and we must say that the performances were of a superior class, which the liberal attendance of the public amply testified.

"ARTICLE 47."—We remind the theatre-going public that this remarkable sensational piece will be presented at the Theatre to-night for the last time, to make way for other attractions.

CHEAP MUSIC.—Messrs. Calder Brothers have just received from J. L. Peters, of New York, and M. Gray of San Francisco, a fine assortment of cheap, elegant and good sheet music, comprising songs, polkas, schottisches, marches, &c., easily arranged and at prices to suit the pockets of all. We have received the following specimens: "Papa, Stay at Home, I'm Motherless Now," a song and chorus, by the popular composer, Will S. Hays; "The Days when I was Young Schottische," and song, "Wait for the Turn of the Tide," both by the popular California composer and pianist, Geo. T. Evans, also "Johnnie's March," one of Kinkel's deservedly popular series of waltzes, schottisches, polkas, marches and galops, entitled "The Right Little Scamps," just the things for amateur players, all of which, with many others, are for sale at Calder Bros.' establishment. Now is the time to make a profitable investment in good, cheap music.
